2 THE COURT: Good morning.

3 (Case called)

4 MR. KOENIG: Good morning, your Honor. Michael Koenig
5 on behalf of the United States. With me is Christina Brown, 6 Alison Anderson, Kathryn Holbrook and Carol Sipperly.

7 THE COURT: Good morning.

8 MR. BREEN: Good morning, your Honor. Ken Breen and 9 Phara Guberman on behalf of Matt Connolly, who is with us here 10 in court today.

11 THE COURT: Good morning.

12 MR. LEVINE: Good morning, your Honor. Seth Levine
13 and Scott Klugman and Miriam Alinikoff on behalf of Mr. Black, 14 and Mr. Black is here with us today.

15 THE COURT: Good morning.

16 This matter is on for sentencing under docket number 17 16 Cr. 370, United States of America v. Matthew Connolly and 18 Gavin Campbell Black, Mr. Connolly having been found guilty of 19 one count of conspiracy to commit wire fraud and bank fraud and 20 two counts of wire fraud, all are class B felonies, carrying 21 statutory maximum penalties of 30 years' imprisonment, five 22 years' supervised release, $1 million fine and a mandatory $100
23 special assessment; Mr. Black having been found guilty of one 24 count of conspiracy to commit wire fraud and one count of wire 25 fraud, those crimes being class B felonies and carrying the

JAO7CONS

1 same statutory maximum penalties.

2 In connection with today's proceedings I have received 3 and reviewed the following, I have laid it out all very 4 carefully: Presentence investigation reports prepared by 5 United States Probation Officer Johnny Kim for Mr. Connolly.
6 That's document 438 on the docket, filed on September 24, 2019;
7 and for Mr. Black, document number 437 filed on September 23, 8 2019.

9 In connection with Mr. Connolly, I have a sentencing 10 memorandum on behalf of Mr. Connolly. Exhibits A through L to 11 that sentencing memorandum are letters from members of his and 12 his wife's family. Exhibits M and N are letters from the Paul 13 Hastings law firm to Mr. Kim concerning the objections to the 14 PSR, as to which I will rule shortly.

15 I have a sentencing memorandum from the United States 16 regarding defendant Matthew Connolly. There are as exhibits to 17 that sentencing memorandum Exhibit A, a document authored by 18 Mr. Connolly; Exhibit B, a declaration of Special Agent Michael 19 McGillicuddy, and there is attached to that an exhibit, Exhibit 20 1, which is document 446-2. I asked for a modification of that 21 exhibit, and I received that, and I'm going to call that 22 Exhibit 1A to Agent McGillicuddy's affidavit, and I have that 23 as well. Exhibit C is the plea agreement of someone I never 24 heard of until yesterday named Takiyuki Yugami. Exhibit D are 25 his 80-plus page sentencing minutes before Judge Rakoff.

1 Exhibit 5 are the sentencing minutes of Mr. Parietti.

2 In connection with Mr. Black, I have received a number
3 of memoranda: A sentencing memorandum from the firm of Levine
4 & Lee. By my count Exhibit 1 consists of 45 letters -- I may 5 have miscounted the number of blue pages -- but at least 45 6 letters, many of them two, three or four pages long from 7 family, friends, coworkers, his parents, his in-laws in New 8 Zealand and his wife.

9 There is also a declaration of Seth Levine in support 10 of Mr. Black's sentencing memorandum, and attach thereto are 11 Exhibits A through Q.

12 In addition, Mr. Levine submitted a submission
13 regarding the applicable sentencing guidelines and a 14 declaration of Mr. Levine in support of that, together with 15 Exhibits A, B, C, D and E.

16 I have a letter received October 22 and filed under 17 seal concerning certain nonpublic matters.

18 I have received in response to my inquiry from the 19 government a letter dated October 21, 2019 and a follow-up 20 e-mail dated October 22, 2019 regarding the prisoner transfer 21 program. I have also reviewed my own research on the subject, 22 including a document called Guidelines for the Evaluation of 23 Transfer Requests Submitted by Foreign Nationals that we found 24 on the Internet; a transfer inquiry and review document that we 25 found on the Internet; and a document from the law offices of

JAO7CONS

1 Alan Ellis in San Francisco and New York that describes that 2 program.

3 In addition and with respect to both defendants, I 4 have reviewed some rather more salient sentencing minutes from 5 the Rabobank case, Judge Rakoff's sentencing of Messrs. Allen
6 and Conti from Mr. Stewart. I have rereviewed the presentence 7 report of Mr. Curtler and reviewed for the first time of 8 Mr. Parietti. I have consulted a number of portions of the 9 transcript and exhibits that were introduced during the course 10 of the trial.

11 Is there anything else I should have received in 12 writing prior to today's proceedings from the government?

13 MR. KOENIG: No, your Honor.

14 THE COURT: From Mr. Connolly?

15 MR. BREEN: No, your Honor.

16 THE COURT: From Mr. Black?

17 MR. LEVINE: No. Thank you, your Honor.

18 THE COURT: Thank you.

19 Has the government reviewed the presentence report?

20 MR. KOENIG: We have, your Honor.

21 THE COURT: Any additions, deletions or corrections?

22 MR. KOENIG: Yes. These are in connection to our 23 reducing the number of requests that we originally told 24 probation about.

25 THE COURT: I'm working with the number 130.

JAO7CONS

1 MR. KOENIG: Yes, yes, but the number became 130 after 2 the probation --

3 THE COURT: Yes, I understand that, but I'm working 4 with the number 130.

5 MR. KOENIG: OK. And then it changes also the 6 intended loss.

7 THE COURT: Oh, there are a lot of changes. Believe 8 me, there are a lot of changes.

9 MR. KOENIG: That's everything.

10 THE COURT: OK. Mr. Breen, have you reviewed the 11 presentence report and gone over it with your client?

12 MR. BREEN: Yes, your Honor.

13 THE COURT: I will be hearing argument and will be 14 reviewing the PSR, and I'm obviously going to make rulings on 15 some objections.

16 Same question to you, Mr. Levine. Have you reviewed 17 it and gone over it with your client?

18 MR. LEVINE: I have, your Honor. Thank you.

19 THE COURT: I have a specific question that I want to 20 ask before we get into this, and that is with respect to Agent
21 McGillicuddy's chart.

22 Am I correct that on page 2 -- by the way, I'm working 23 with the chart that has the number I asked to be added to the 24 end.

25 MR. KOENIG: Yes.

JAO7CONS

1 THE COURT: Am I correct that the sixth entry on -- 2 the fifth and sixth entries actually -- the sixth and seventh
3 entries on this chart relate to Exhibit 7-001 and deal with a 4 count of acquittal as to Mr. Connolly, namely Count Ten?

5 MR. KOENIG: Yes, your Honor.

6 THE COURT: Thank you. Am I correct that the entry on 7 the next page, the third page, the third entry dated 9/26/2007
8 relating to Exhibit 7-001, deals -- I'm sorry -- the first 9 one -- the first one deals with Count Eight; is that correct?

12 dated 9/26/2007.

13 The first page the first entry is 2/21/2005. The 14 second page the first entry is 8/12/2007. The third page, the 15 first entry is 10/18/2007. The third page, the first entry is 16 9/25/2008.

17 Let's just go to the first page. The first page, 18 about two thirds of the way down there is an entry dated 19 7/20/2006 and the relevant exhibit is 8-001. Am I correct that 20 that relates to Count Eight, a count of acquittal of 21 Mr. Connolly?

22 MR. KOENIG: Yes.

23 THE COURT: And am I correct that the entries dated 24 9/26/2007, Exhibit 7-001, relate to Count Ten, a count of 25 acquittal of Mr. Connolly?

JAO7CONS

1 MR. KOENIG: Yes.

2 THE COURT: Thank you. I just wanted to clear that 3 up.

4 OK. So, I think the logical thing to do is to hear 5 the defendants' objections to the presentence report and to 6 hear the government's response to that first. And I will start 7 with Mr. Connolly and then Mr. Black.

8 MR. BREEN: Your Honor, we have a myriad of 9 objections.

10 THE COURT: Yes, I know.

11 MR. BREEN: But I will cut to the chase. We think 12 that the nature and circumstances of the offense are atypical 13 given that there was open and pervasive conduct, no steps to 14 conceal and no profit demonstrated by Mr. Connolly.

15 THE COURT: I should say you can rest assured I have 16 been immersed in the arguments that you've made in writing, 17 both of you, just so you know that. That said, you may say 18 whatever you want.

19 MR. BREEN: Well, I will reference the discussion we 20 had on the loss amount. The loss amount is completely 21 incalculable. It completely ignores how swaps work in the 22 market, how swaps are meant to offset risk, and the zero sum 23 game is just a ridiculously ill-informed way of describing a 24 swap, because most of the market that is in swaps is derisking.
25 And you heard that from every witness who talked about why they

JAO7CONS

1 hedged, what is hedging the market. And the simplistic
2 argument that if somebody has hedged, that that loss was passed 3 down the line to somebody else makes no sense and is not 4 something that could be used here, because that victim of 5 somebody down the line, they haven't shown that it wasn't 6 Deutsche Bank who eventually was the one who isn't in a 7 completely hedged position, or any of the other banks that have 8 pled guilty to manipulating LIBOR. They haven't proved any 9 loss. The numbers that they prove is a methodology that's 10 completely made up, I mean based on numbers that --

11 THE COURT: They usually are in these kinds of cases, 12 Mr. Breen.

13 MR. BREEN: Right. But usually there is actual data 14 that is trustworthy, that the government didn't say itself that 15 we couldn't use it because it was so not trustworthy, and then 16 they turn around and use it themselves, which is what they did.
17 Usually it's not a situation where there is a presumption that 18 every submission that they say was an ask was moved from a 19 reasonable range or moved from a number that would be a real 20 supportable number to something else. No testimony at all in 21 the case from any of the cooperators or anybody else whether 22 the submission moved, whether or not the fixing moved.

23 They proved nothing. They didn't prove victims
24 either, right? How do you prove -- the victims they presented 25 in the indictment weren't the same victims that they presented

JAO7CONS

1 at trial, aren't the same victims that they presented in 2 sentencing. Again, you know, presenting victims, they 3 acknowledge at Mr. Parietti's sentencing hearing that in order 4 to determine a real loss or an actual loss you would have to 5 figure out their hedging position. Well, of course, the whole 6 case has been about that.

7 So, there shouldn't be any ten victims. They proved 8 zero victim, zero loss. The idea that Matt Connolly is a 9 supervisor and deserves an enhancement for that is 10 preposterous. First, given the active role he played, 11 supervisor only in name, not supervising to Parietti, who made 12 more money than him always, who was a managing director when 13 Matt wasn't, Matt not even being a trader but in name being on 14 the desk.

15 So, not only that, fact specific to Matt Connolly, but 16 you look at the government's position they took with Curtler, 17 Mr. Curtler was a supervisor of a submissions desk and 18 supervised Mr. King and really was the kingpin of the entire 19 submissions situation that was happening in London. I mean 20 they can't take a position that is so disparate and say that 21 Mr. Curtler was not a supervisor but Mr. Connolly is.

22 THE COURT: Well, they can, but I might not find it 23 very appealing.

24 MR. BREEN: Right. And because they took that 25 position and that's the sentence, you know, if you were to

1 sentence Mr. Connolly with that enhancement, it would be 2 disparate, and that's something that the guidelines seek to 3 avoid.

4 With regard to intended loss, they assume with the 5 loss number that every loss was intended. But how is the loss 6 intended if you thought the other side was hedged, like 99 7 percent of the marketplace?

8 We didn't present it at trial, but we heard from our 9 expert that 99.9 percent of the risk in the market -- in the 10 spot market -- dissipates by hedges if you take .01 percent.

11 Abuse of trust? Abuse of trust is not an enhancement 12 that should apply. I mean that's something that usually 13 applies in the fiduciary context, not in a situation where you 14 have you a counterparty. I haven't seen any authority that 15 says that they have a fiduciary duty to a counterparty in a 16 trade, to Deutsche Bank? Abuse of position of trust? Deutsche 17 Bank pled guilty here -- I'm not sure -- and paid enormous 18 fines. I'm not sure there is a fiduciary duty to a bank that 19 knew about it, put everything in place, had no rules against 20 it, encouraged the spot desk to sit next to the money market 21 desk. There is just no enhancement there.

22 Abuse of trust to BBA? They had no rules until after 23 Matt Connolly left the bank voluntarily. I'm not sure how that 24 could ever form any kind of relationship -- fiduciary or 25 otherwise -- that could be abused by what happened here.

JAO7CONS

1 None of those enhancements should apply. There 2 shouldn't be any loss amount that is on top.

3 I missed one: Activity happened in a foreign 4 jurisdiction. An enhancement that's based around the idea that 5 when people move their operations offshore to avoid detection, 6 that that's an enhancement at sentencing. There was no moving 7 anything offshore. The LIBOR desk was always in London. You 8 know, that enhancement and several other enhancements are 9 already baked into the base offense, and there can't be 10 enhancement for that reason.

11 Your Honor, you heard all about this case and Matt
12 Connolly's role, three or four e-mails.

13 THE COURT: Can we limit right now to the objections 14 to the PSR? Because I want to rule on those. And then I will 15 give you an opportunity to argue the other stuff on behalf of 16 your client.

17 MR. BREEN: Just a final point then on loss amount.

18 THE COURT: Thank you.

19 MR. BREEN: The jury acquitted on the Parietti-related 20 accounts.

21 THE COURT: Yes, it did. Indeed it did.

22 MR. BREEN: And that was very significant.

23 THE COURT: It was to me.

24 MR. BREEN: He had a side agreement. You know, the 25 government is making an appeal to try to aggregate the Court

JAO7CONS

1 about Mr. Connolly. They're taking a position that's not -- on 2 all these issues -- that's inconsistent with Mr. Parietti's and 3 Mr. Curtler's positions, and they shouldn't be allowed to do 4 that. They told Judge Engelmayer that they wouldn't, but 5 they're doing it anyway. Thank you.

6 THE COURT: OK.

7 Mr. Levine, are you arguing for Mr. Black?

8 MR. LEVINE: Yes, your Honor, thank you.

9 With respect to our objections to the guidelines, we 10 have, as you know from our papers, several primary objections:

11 First, the loss calculation. The loss calculation, we 12 believe that the government -- the intended loss, I should 13 say -- should be disregarded entirely because it is purely 14 speculative and without basis.

15 We start first with the government's main witness, Mr.
16 Curtler, who said at sentencing, in his submission, that the 17 methodology was "absurd" and ignored -- I'm summarizing -- the 18 realities of the market. If Mr. Curtler, as he has been, is to 19 be credited, he should be credited here as well because in this 20 matter he is entirely right that this methodology bears no 21 relationship to any kind of reasonable methodology that could 22 achieve a number that's reasonable.

23 Now always in complex cases, complex financial cases, 24 you have to make an analyses which involve all kinds of 25 sophisticated means of looking at data, and estimating, and

JAO7CONS

1 making the best judgment you can make. Protection cannot be 2 the enemy of good. But here, your Honor, you don't have it.
3 What you have is a methodology that literally counts only a 4 counterparty's losses and not their wins. So, I think what you 5 end up having is not only are you disregarding the hedging but 6 you're also disregarding the realities of that counterparty 7 over these days.

8 We think that this methodology is so flawed that it
9 really has no providence at all, and I think we're prepared 10 certainly to present on that extensively and go through all of 11 the reasons -- I put them in our brief -- but let me just talk 12 about another piece of it from this chart. Because what the 13 chart says, your Honor, if you look at it, is that after ten 14 years and dozens of banks paying money, and lots of banks doing 15 whatever the government told them to do, and all of the 16 analysis, after all of this and this trillion dollar scandal 17 that they talked about, their best estimate is $4 million on 18 the intended loss on the whole thing. But, as the Court knows, 19 the intended loss calculation doesn't work that way; it has to 20 be intended loss of this man. And if you take their chart and 21 you just break it down, what you find out, your Honor, is that 22 the portion -- there are 16 instances --

23 THE COURT: I've done the math.

24 MR. LEVINE: I know you have. I have a chart I can 25 show to you if you want, but I don't think it was necessary

JAO7CONS

1 because I knew you had done it.

2 What it shows is the $166,000. So, we stand here
3 today talking about intended loss, and I'm going to say so it's 4 clear four the record, the intended loss calculation here is 5 literally absurd, so as far as I'm concerned I am now through 6 the looking glass. But even in Wonderland.

7 THE COURT: Got it. You thought you were there for a 8 long time, Mr. Levine.

9 MR. LEVINE: Yes. But let's talk about the internal 10 logic of what they've done. 16 instances. And if you notice, 11 Judge, on their chart, as I know you've seen, there are these 12 dashes sometimes.

13 THE COURT: I assume that means no intended loss.

14 MR. LEVINE: Yes.

15 THE COURT: That's what I assume that means.

16 MR. LEVINE: I take it that way. And while we can't 17 know exactly how they did this, based on our efforts I'll tell 18 you that's what it means.

19 What is interesting for Mr. Black -- since we're 20 talking about intended loss -- of the 16 instances, four of 21 them, 25 percent have no loss. OK? So if we cherrypick in -- 22 they've cherrypicked the ripest cherry possible. But even if 23 you were going to give them their rate, they have a 25 percent 24 miss rate after ten years. So 25 percent of them, including 25 exhibits they presented at trial, they cannot show even now

JAO7CONS

1 that there was any intention to create any loss.

2 So, this case is now about $166,000, and 25 percent 3 rate is zero. OK. Well, what happens if one looks at the 4 counterparties that are the losses that are represented and 5 just says over the 16 days that they say Mr. Black should be 6 held accountable, what happens if you just take their gains or 7 losses for those 16 days and net them, just the counterparty?
8 We've done just the counterparties who we believe these losses.
9 The number drops to 80,000.

10 Now, they claim that you should assume a one basis
11 point adjustment which translates to an eighth of a basis
12 point. That's wrong, because again Mr. Curtler didn't testify 13 to that. He said maybe a half, and there is a question of what 14 happens after the financial crisis. I will footnote financial 15 crisis for a second because let's forget about that for a 16 second. And about 125 or so of these are before the crisis.
17 So, it's half a basis point. Now the 80 is somewhere around 18 $40,000.

19 So, if we're going to take this seriously -- and I 20 don't think you should because I think this is madness -- but 21 that's fine. If you're going to take them seriously, the 22 intended loss on this chart should be at the most 40 grand.
23 It's still more than it should be, but it's $40,000.

24 Frankly, if you add up all the gains and losses of all 25 the counterparties on Gavin's days, not just the counterparties

JAO7CONS

1 who papered a loss, it gets down to about $25,000, and if you
2 cut that in half it's $12,000.

3 So, my point to you, your Honor, is you have something
4 that is flawed. But even on the "this is the best they can do"
5 model, what it reflects, I think, is something very profound, 6 that even under the government's best view of this case, after 7 the many miles we've walked together on this, we're talking 8 about a case that's between zero and $166,000; and I without 9 any big math, just looking at what they've done, have it at, to 10 be kind, 40 or less. Now, that means that were this Court to 11 adopt any of this, the loss amount should be less than in my 12 view $40,000. So, we object entirely.

13 There is also, your Honor -- and life is short, but 14 there is an affidavit here.

15 THE COURT: You have all the time you want.

16 MR. LEVINE: There is an affidavit here, your Honor, 17 from Special Agent McGillicuddy. Well, that's testimonial. We 18 received no information, no data where this has been provided.
19 It's testimonial, and you've ruled on that. Can I have the 20 3500? They can give it to me right now.

21 THE COURT: Is there 3500 in connection with Agent
22 McGillicuddy's affidavit?

23 MR. KOENIG: Not that I know of.

24 THE COURT: OK, let's keep going.

25 MR. LEVINE: But my point, your Honor, is I don't

JAO7CONS

1 think this affidavit was written without all kinds of 2 calculations and graphs, so I think Mr. Koenig memory or 3 knowledge might be limited, but on that basis alone you can 4 strike the whole thing. But if you keep it -- if you keep 5 it -- we're talking about 40 grand or less -- I actually think 6 it's even less than that; I think it's about 12 -- so it 7 actual -- so, actually the enhancement that's being applied by 8 the 18 points does not count at all, and it should be a much, 9 much lower enhancement.

10 THE COURT: Well, if you were right, and if it were 11 $12,000, the enhancement would be two points?

12 MR. LEVINE: Yes. Yes.

13 THE COURT: If it were 40,000, it would be either four 14 or six points.

15 MR. LEVINE: And I will say that one thing that's very 16 interesting about this is you then get to -- so basically if 17 that's right -- and that's their best estimate, and I don't 18 think I've done anything here than some math and basically 19 apply the testimony -- I think that is very consistent with the 20 instinct of probation, which looked at these numbers and fairly 21 said, look, this is not for us given the complexity, but just 22 looking at this we think we're over here and nowhere over here.
23 So, I think even if you give the government whatever it's due, 24 we start there.

25 You also note, your Honor, that in one part of the

JAO7CONS

1 affidavit, but there was some estimate of a market impact of 2 $500 million. There is no calculation for that.

3 THE COURT: Trust me, Mr. Levine, that is not going to 4 factor into anything I do here today.

5 MR. LEVINE: So then we get to the last piece of this 6 loss, which is there are now apparently victims that we've 7 never known about before -- which is my second objection, which 8 is about the victims enhancement. As the Court is aware, the 9 victims enhancement applies only for actual loss. There is no
10 showing of actual loss in this case. It is conceded that there 11 is no actual loss, so the victims enhancement does not apply at 12 all.

13 THE COURT: And the section of the guidelines that so 14 states is? I'm going to make you sing for your supper, 15 Mr. Levine.

16 MR. LEVINE: Just give me one second, your Honor. I
17 believe it's 2B1.1. And it is also recognized in this Circuit 18 by a case called Skys, 637 F.3d 146.

19 THE COURT: Can we find it?

20 MR. LEVINE: Sure. 2B1.1(b)(2)(A)(i) and comment 1.

21 THE COURT: Which says, "Victim means any person who 22 sustained any part of the actual loss determined under the 23 subsection (b)(1) or any individual who sustained bodily injury 24 as a result of the offense."

25 MR. LEVINE: So we would argue -- and the comment,

JAO7CONS

1 your Honor --

2 THE COURT: So, it's your position that because the 3 government admits it can't prove actual loss and has instead 4 relied on intended loss, that the victim enhancement has to 5 drop out because victims are only people who suffer actual 6 loss.

7 MR. LEVINE: Correct. That's correct.

8 THE COURT: And your Second Circuit citation for that 9 is?

10 MR. LEVINE: It is the Skys case. It is 637 F.3d 146.
11 The pin cite is 153 to 154. I would also command to the 12 Court's attention -- which I know the Court has already seen -- 13 we covered this in our brief, on page 15 and 16 of our 14 guidelines brief.

15 So, I think the victims should be out from that alone, 16 however, I then took a look at what Special Agent McGillicuddy
17 says the victims are. Now, I know that the government put a 18 website out that requested victim impact statements by October 19 1. We have been provided no statements; I assume that there 20 are no such statements.

21 THE COURT: Are there any victim impact statements?

22 MR. KOENIG: Not that I am aware of.

23 THE COURT: Thank you.

24 MR. LEVINE: And, your Honor, I don't know whether or 25 not the government had the opportunity to speak to these

JAO7CONS

1 purported victims that we've never heard of before. Obviously, 2 if they did and they told them that they don't want to be 3 victims, that would be something that would be useful to know 4 right now, but I don't know if there is any contact with these 5 folks at all. I'm curious.

6 I note that of these victims at least four of them are 7 LIBOR panel members on at least some LIBOR panel, including 8 Bank of Nova Scotia, which not only was a panel member, a bank 9 that actually our expert witness worked at and was prepared to 10 testify that there is no victim there. So, I don't know what 11 the good faith basis is -- even if there was actual loss -- for 12 putting up any of these folks.

13 I would also note that of three of the victims that 14 are European banks -- Union Credit, ING, Stenzka -- I'm sure I 15 pronounced that incorrectly -- they were members of the Euribor 16 panel. So, again we have --

17 THE COURT: Everybody was in the game.

18 MR. LEVINE: Right. So, your Honor, I find it to be 19 troubling that we're at sentencing, and in an affidavit that 20 wasn't even provided to probation -- even though this 21 calculation must have been done before Mr. Parietti and Mr.
22 Curtler's sentencings -- why we're now seeing new victims and 23 seeing folks that on their face don't really seem to be 24 consistent with the letter or the spirit of the intended loss 25 guideline, and therefore I think that they are not an

JAO7CONS

1 appropriate basis to issue the victims enhancement, but they 2 are an appropriate basis I think for this Court to again look 3 at the methodology that the government has arrived at to 4 suggest a sentence and for you to arrive at that again 5 undermines the pillars of what the loss could or couldn't be or 6 who was harmed here.

7 I'm not rearguing what is not to be argued. I'm just 8 saying for the purpose of assessing the loss today and the 9 victims, these guys ain't it, and so I would ask that the 10 victims enhancement not apply.

11 And I will tell you, your Honor, for some of these 12 victims -- for example, they put in Standard Charter and 13 Merrill as one of the victims. What is really interesting is 14 if you actually take the chart, if you actually take the time 15 and you look at the few trades that Standard Charter was 16 involved in, there are four days in which they have some trade
17 position of the 16 of my client's, they have them netted as I 18 think a $400 loss. Because if you notice in several of these 19 the loss on the big day is $400, $1500, very small. We just 20 looked. What was Standard Charter's experience on the days 21 that they said Mr. Black did something that caused a loss?
22 Just those four days. It turns out if you net them they made 23 $2700; they didn't lose $400. And frankly if you do this with 24 some of these other victims like Merrill -- which is also 25 attributed to a day that they want to talk about my client, an

1 actual loss -- you find out that the numbers just by looking at 2 that customer and the days they've caught in total go way down.

3 So, again, my concern here is that not only are they 4 wrong on the law but they're presenting facts in a way which do 5 not achieve any ability to make even a reasonable estimate of 6 loss or victimhood. So, I think that those all should be 7 disregarded. And I'm happy to show you the charts if you'd 8 like.

9 I think we then get to the third enhancement to which 10 we object, which is sophisticated means. Here there are a 11 couple of elements. First is whether there has been a 12 concealment. The evidence in this trial, as this Court has 13 pointed out -- one thing we didn't have in this trial was 14 concealment; everything was out in the open. There was never a 15 dispute of what happened in terms of the conversations. There 16 is a dispute as to characterization but nothing was concealed.
17 So, that doesn't apply.

18 And then we get to the one that I find the most sort 19 of ironic, which is that my client -- who has virtually no 20 experience in the United States, who was sitting on the desk in 21 London trading LIBOR, which is literally the London market 22 rate -- somehow is going to be additionally penalized because 23 he somehow took this outside the United States. Plainly he did 24 not do that. He plainly had no intention of concealing 25 something like we see with someone who moves an investment

JAO7CONS

1 scheme offshore to avoid authorities. So, you see to me the 2 application of that here leads to an absurd result in the sense
3 that it's a London metric, a London trader, a London desk.
4 It's not even U.S. dollar cash market; it's the London market
5 for U.S. cash.

6 So, while that's not an argument about all the 7 jurisdictional issues -- we've never contested that -- it's 8 just not a reasonable thing to do to apply that standard. It's 9 inconsistent with good sense and the realities. So I don't 10 think it's applicable.

11 The final specific objection we have is the abuse of 12 trust enhancement. The abuse of trust enhancement, as my 13 colleague has said, simply doesn't apply, and it doesn't apply 14 because that enhancement is designed to penalize conduct that 15 involves fiduciary duties among the people and counterparties 16 where a person has broken their trust.

17 There is no dispute in this case that every 18 transaction was arms length. We presented, as you've seen -- I 19 have showed it more than probably you care to see -- the 20 contract is the master agreement, which disclaims reliance, 21 fiduciary duty and all of those things. I think the law is 22 quite clear that you need to have an abuse of trust. None of 23 the witnesses we've heard, no one has testified that that's an 24 abuse of trust here.

25 Further, if you wanted to even overlook that fatal

JAO7CONS

1 defect, then you have to ask, well, is this the kind of 2 discretionary activity in which you might still want to apply 3 abuse of trust. The answer is for Mr. Black he did not have 4 discretion. We all agree he had no supervisory role, he had no 5 authority over these. He didn't even have access to the 6 computer to submit these things. His conduct is entirely based 7 on what communications he had with those folks. There is no 8 discretion. So the abuse of trust element is getting at those 9 kinds of relationships. And, obviously, given that this 10 conduct was throughout not only this bank at Deutsche, but as 11 the government says in their briefs repeatedly all of these 12 other banks, the notion that for this purpose that Mr. Black by 13 following the instructions of his seniors doesn't dismiss the 14 problem that we have, but it does say that that's not an abuse 15 of trust. And again it's another guideline calculation which 16 the government offered no real justification for. Probation
17 put it in because they said this is their position. I will say 18 the probation department footnoted every single one of their 19 enhancements and recalculated each time, and I will say for the 20 record I am very grateful for them for that, because I think 21 they really tried to --

22 THE COURT: Mr. Kim is an extraordinary officer in 23 cases like this.

24 MR. LEVINE: Yes. And I think that he took it not 25 only very seriously, but he gave the Court a report.

JAO7CONS

1 So, I don't know why the government is pushing for 2 these enhancements. They just don't apply. This is not a
3 matter of debate. And obviously under the guidelines, though 4 we submitted a second brief on guidelines, while they're 5 significant, we don't think they are the main story here.

6 THE COURT: Oh, you are so correct about that.

7 MR. LEVINE: But again, where we are in a position 8 where we see things that are clear errors of law we are obliged 9 to point them out to this Court.

10 So, if you apply all those objections, then we think 11 exactly what we said in our brief, which is the appropriate 12 guideline calculation here is level 7, which yields a zone A 13 sentencing range of zero to six.

14 Now I will talk later about the factors and things 15 like the Court is more interested in, but the wisdom of the 16 probation report is that whichever way you want to look at it
17 from their perspective we come out the same place, but I do 18 think for purposes of the order, and Rule 32 and the rules, 19 that these enhancements are not established. And certainly a 20 loss in victimhood we think cannot be applied. It certainly 21 cannot be applied without a thorough Fatico hearing, which I 22 think would be a thorough waste of the Court's time in light of 23 the record and in light of what the government's position is.
24 So, we would suggest those enhancements should all be struck.

25 Now, I know the Court is aware -- and Mr. Kim

JAO7CONS

1 documented this meticulously -- we made a series of other 2 objections to the report. You know, many of those things are 3 matters that -- and Mr. Kim actually accepted many of our 4 objections and made modifications, including, for example, that 5 Bank of America is not a victim. So, when they say Merrill is 6 a victim and, yeah, it was premerger, but the one victim is out 7 who has the successor right to the other victim that they're 8 now asserting, it just sort of gets a little silly. But what I 9 would say to you is we would stand on the objections that are 10 in our letter. I don't think ultimately because they're 11 factual matters of which is quite familiar -- I'm happy to go 12 through them, but they really are objecting to the language in 13 various parts of the description of conduct to conform with 14 what we think the evidence showed, but I don't know that the 15 Court is necessarily going to quarrel with any of those. You 16 may not agree with our characterizations, but that's what they 17 are. So, I am happy to go through them. We do stand on them
18 as a matter of law. So again I would ask you to properly 19 calculate Mr. Black's guidelines as level 7 and zone A. Thank 20 you, your Honor.

21 MR. BREEN: Just for completeness before the 22 government goes.

23 THE COURT: Yes, Mr. Breen.

24 MR. BREEN: If we applied the methodology that 25 Mr. Levine set forth -- which we think is the applicable

JAO7CONS

1 methodology -- with the six entries on Exhibit 1A that deal
2 with Matt Connolly they add up to $47,000.

3 THE COURT: I know.

4 MR. BREEN: With the methodology it's less than 5 $3,000, and it puts it at a level below $6500 where there is no 6 enhancement.

7 THE COURT: And I think, am I correct that Agent
8 McGillicuddy's chart does not include Count Three, the Count 9 Three communication?

10 MR. KOENIG: That's correct.

11 MR. BREEN: And the rest that had to do with Mr.
12 Parietti, it's our position --

13 THE COURT: Oh, well, we will talk about Mr. Parietti.
14 Don't worry, I have plenty to say about Mr. Parietti.

15 MR. BREEN: Thank you.

16 MR. LEVINE: So, your Honor, I haven't gone through 17 today all the details, but our brief goes through 18 systematically all the reasons the loss amount makes no sense.
19 Thank you very much. I appreciate it.

20 THE COURT: Mr. Koenig.

21 MR. KOENIG: Thank you, your Honor. I would like to 22 address a few points.

23 THE COURT: Just address the objections to the 24 presentence report. Don't address any other points. Address 25 the objections to the presentence report.

JAO7CONS

1 MR. KOENIG: OK. Well, on the loss amount they have a 2 big section in their brief about how the 2015 amendment made it
3 so you can only look as what Gavin Black did himself, or what 4 Matt Connolly did himself, and that is simply not the law in 5 this Circuit. The 2015 amendment didn't change the law in this 6 Circuit. In fact, the 2015 amendment adopted the law of this 7 Circuit.

8 And, importantly, I think it's important to point out
9 that the amendment did not change Section 1B1.3, which says 10 that your guideline calculation is made based on your acts and 11 those of your coconspirators. And the Second Circuit has 12 recognized that, and so I don't think you can just pick out the 13 ones where a defendant is listed as the one who is the 14 requester.

15 As far as the Skys case goes --

16 THE COURT: You know, "Without any determined amount 17 of actual loss to financial institutions, the District Court 18 inappropriately included the institutions as victims under 19 Section 2B1.1(b)(2)." That's the Second Circuit. I'm kind of 20 bound by what they say.

21 MR. KOENIG: Well, to the extent that they were 22 arguing that because we used intended loss instead of actual 23 loss, I don't think the case stands for the proposition that 24 you can't also look at actual victims.

25 THE COURT: Yes, but you said to me -- and I believe

1 you -- that you can't calculate actual loss. It's been 2 repeatedly said in this courtroom -- you weren't here -- that 3 you can't calculate actual loss. So, OK, if the government is 4 now saying but we can calculate actual loss as to Merrill
5 Lynch, I don't buy it. OK? I don't believe it. You can't 6 talk out of both sides of your mouth.

7 MR. KOENIG: And I don't think we are talking out of 8 both sides of our mouth.

9 THE COURT: Good.

10 MR. KOENIG: When we are talking about restitution, 11 for example --

12 THE COURT: Restitution is not applicable in this 13 case. Excuse me while I go to Mr. Parietti's sentencing 14 minutes. Restitution is not applicable in this case.

15 MR. KOENIG: I understand that, and that is -- I 16 raised it because that's the context in which we made that 17 argument.

18 Let's just take the example of when someone gets their 19 car stolen. Right? Your car is stolen, you're still the 20 victim, you don't get restitution in the amount that you're 21 insured for, but the person who steals the car is still tagged 22 with the intended loss of the value of the car.

23 THE COURT: The District Court -- my friend Judge
24 Pauley, an absolutely brilliant judge in cases like this, 25 rarely makes a mistake. "The District Court inappropriately

1 included the institutions as victim under Section 2B1.1(b)(2)."
2 It's like really plain English. It's really plain English.

3 MR. KOENIG: But do you see my point though that you 4 can have loss that's calculable on contracts, but the fact that 5 they're hedged doesn't mean that that's still not a loss.

6 THE COURT: I'm sorry. Ms. Sipperly and Ms. Anderson
7 said ad nauseum that you can't calculate the loss in this case.
8 And if you can't, then I'm saying you can't calculate it for 9 any one individual on any one trade. You can't calculate the 10 loss. OK? Let's move on.

11 MR. KOENIG: All right. Another thing that I'd like 12 to address is the abuse of trust. And they're talking about 13 this as though it's just based on your counterparty and arms 14 length transaction, and there has to be --

15 THE COURT: No, they had an argument about Deutsche 16 Bank.

17 MR. KOENIG: True. But the position of trust here was 18 that, you know, the BBA and the marketplace put in them to do a 19 fair and honest --

20 THE COURT: Excuse me. There is no evidence in this 21 case -- if you want to have a Fatico hearing on this, I will be 22 happy to. There is no evidence in this case that the BBA 23 trusted anyone to do anything. You shied away from it.

24 MR. KOENIG: OK. Well, there still was trust --

25 THE COURT: For good reason.

JAO7CONS

1 MR. KOENIG: There still was trust placed in them by 2 the marketplace generally, by their employer.

3 THE COURT: No, no, no, no. OK.

4 MR. KOENIG: It's not vis-a-vis the counterparty. The 5 Barrett case we cited in our brief says you don't have to have 6 a fiduciary relationship. I mean it's just common sense that 7 when you are charged with submitting numbers to this very 8 important financial benchmark there is an element of trust by 9 the market. Whoever you want to say it is, they are entrusted 10 to do it. And in every single case that we have sentenced so 11 far, the abuse of trust enhancement has been given.

12 THE COURT: Well, I'm not every single judge. And let 13 me just say one thing right off the bat -- and I will say it
14 again in a few minutes -- the findings I made in cooperator 15 cases with no challenge weren't findings at all; they were an 16 empty exercise.

17 MR. KOENIG: Understood. Understood.

18 THE COURT: In this case the exercise has been 19 anything but empty.

20 MR. KOENIG: I agree. I definitely agree.

21 Well, you know, I think for the rest of it we can just 22 rest on our papers; that's pretty much what we have.

23 THE COURT: Your papers are fairly comprehensive.

24 MR. KOENIG: Yes.

25 THE COURT: OK. I want to take a five minute break,

1 because I need a five minute break, and I will be right back.

2 (Recess)

3 THE COURT: OK. I've already done this, but I had 4 intended to begin this part of the sentencing with a tender of 5 tremendous thanks to probation officer Johnny Kim. Mr. Levine 6 gave me an opening.

7 Officer Kim is the probation officer who is assigned 8 to complex financial cases. He is assigned to those cases for 9 a reason, both because he is willing to undertake an analysis
10 of the complexities and because he candidly and conspicuously 11 points out to judges where the holes might be, and he has done 12 that in spades in connection with these presentence reports, 13 and I simply could not be more grateful to him for all the hard 14 work that he has done.

15 So, I am required to calculate the sentencing 16 guidelines. Officer Kim has calculated the guidelines using 17 most though not all of the government's suggested enhancements.
18 He has carefully reviewed the defendants' challenges to the use 19 of those enhancements and has in several cases advised me that 20 I should make the final call because he cannot realistically 21 advise on the question. And that is particularly true as to 22 intended loss amount. I'm not sure can I do any better than 23 he, but I will do my duty.

24 I wish to emphasize something that I said during the 25 government's presentation. In each such instance Officer Kim

JAO7CONS

1 reminded the Court that I had made findings consistent with the 2 government's position in connection with the sentencing of 3 those cooperators whom I was permitted to sentence. That is of 4 no moment to me today.

5 The cooperators did not challenge the government's use 6 of enhancements or its calculation of loss amount except to 7 note for the purposes of the record that loss amount could not 8 be calculated -- a position with which I wholeheartedly agree.
9 Therefore, nothing that was done in connection with the 10 sentencing of the cooperators can be taken as an indication 11 that I have previously considered and rejected the arguments
12 that are being made by Messrs. Connolly and Black, or that I 13 believe myself bound by "findings" made in connection with 14 cooperators' sentencings. I am not so bound.

15 I begin in exactly the same place that Judge Rakoff 16 began in his sentencing of the Rabobank defendants that went to 17 trial: The guidelines, no matter how they are calculated, are 18 so fundamentally flawed that they cannot be relied upon to come 19 up with a sentence that is sufficient but not greater than 20 necessary to effectuate the goals of the sentencing statute.
21 That is true no matter how you calculate the intended loss 22 amount. And because my faith in the guidelines is so 23 attenuated in these sorts of cases, it is really absurd for me 24 to have to go through this exercise.

25 The government and both defendants agree that the base

JAO7CONS

1 offense level for these convictions is 7. The government seeks 2 a two point enhancement to the guidelines for each defendant
3 for use of sophisticated means. And, specifically, as I read 4 in the government's brief filed in connection with 5 Mr. Connolly's sentencing -- portions of which were also deemed 6 applicable to Mr. Black -- it relies on Section 2B1.1(b)(10)(B) 7 of the guidelines, which provides that an enhancement is 8 appropriate if "a substantial part of the fraudulent scheme was 9 committed from outside the United States." Defendants have 10 argued this morning that this subsection applies when 11 extraterritorial conduct was undertaken for the purpose of 12 concealing the offense, as when operations are moved offshore 13 from the United States with conduct targeting residents of the 14 United States.

15 Now, that caveat does not appear in the language of 16 the statute, and if I may quote Justice Kagan's rather 17 prescient remark from her confirmation hearing, we are all 18 textualists now.

19 The argument propounded by Mr. Levine and Mr. Breen
20 relies on the instruction in Section 6(c)(2) of Public Law 21 105-184 rather than on the text of the law itself, and the 22 argument fails even if one considers the legislative history, 23 because the legislative history directs the Sentencing
24 Commission to "provide an additional appropriate sentencing 25 enhancement if the offense involved a sophisticated means,

JAO7CONS

1 including but not limited to sophisticated concealment efforts
2 such as perpetrating the offense from outside the United 3 States." It could not be clearer from that language that 4 sophisticated means enhancement is available for conduct other 5 than sophisticated offshore concealment efforts. There were no 6 such efforts in this case.

7 The crime was committed abroad. Nothing about that 8 fact makes this a sophisticated crime. The London Interbank 9 Rate is -- no surprise here -- set in London, not in the United 10 States. All the submissions that were used in calculating the 11 various LIBORs were made to an entity called the British 12 Bankers Association which -- no surprise here -- is 13 headquartered in London. Certainly, at Deutsche Bank the 14 submissions were made from its submitting desk in its offices
15 in London, by an individual who worked in London. So, the fact 16 that efforts were made to manipulate LIBOR in London just 17 doesn't make it sophisticated.

18 Yet there can be no question that "sophisticated 19 means," as the dictionary and I understand that phrase, were 20 used in the commission of the offense. The word 21 "sophisticated" is defined in the dictionary as developed to a 22 high degree of complexity. As far as the Sentencing Commission 23 is concerned, the degree of complexity that's needed to qualify 24 a crime as one using sophisticated means is actually quite low.
25 When an offense is carried out repeatedly over a long period of

JAO7CONS

1 time, when the essence of the offense is lying -- in this case
2 about a submitting bank's anticipating borrowing costs for a 3 particular currency over a particular tenor -- and when a 4 coordination is required to carry the scheme out, courts in 5 this Circuit and elsewhere have readily applied the 6 sophisticated means enhancement -- not the one cited by the 7 government and Mr. Kim but the one in Section 2B1.1(b)(10)(C).
8 The offense otherwise involved sophisticated means and the 9 defendant intentionally engaged in or caused the conduct 10 constituting sophisticated means.

11 Even those factors are the least of the sophistication 12 inherent in this particular crime. The setting of LIBOR fixes 13 was an inherently sophisticated exercise. It involved the 14 evaluation by highly educated individuals at 16 different 15 submitting banks of masses of financial, political and economic 16 information and trends, the distillation of that information 17 into an estimate of each submitting bank's borrowing cost in 18 multiple currencies across multiple tenors five days a week
19 every single week and the transmission of that information
20 worldwide. At times during the relevant period the submissions 21 also involved evaluating rather strange requests made by the 22 Bank of England, which were addressed to the submitting bank in 23 an effort -- whether misguided or not, I cannot say -- to 24 stabilize a crumbling worldwide financial market. The setting 25 of LIBOR is an intrinsically sophisticated exercise, therefore

JAO7CONS

1 any effort to manipulate LIBOR by introducing forbidden factors 2 into a submitting bank's submission qualifies in my book as 3 using sophisticated means to commit the crime -- far more 4 sophisticated than if they had been running a telemarketing
5 scam from Canada. The two point enhancement applies.

6 The government seeks the government seeks a two point 7 enhancement as to both defendants for abuse of trust. The 8 enhancement is most emphatically denied.

9 Abuse of trust, as I understand the term, means 10 putting one over on someone to whom you owe some sort of 11 special duty, if not always a fiduciary duty, then at least 12 some duty recognized at law some enhanced duty. The defendants 13 owed no special duty whatever to Deutsche Bank's trading 14 counterparties. They were in the antithesis of a relationship 15 of trust with those counterparties, and the very terms of their 16 arrangement, as set forth in the ISDA agreement among trading 17 institutions makes that crystal clear. Caveat emptor says that 18 agreement -- let the trader beware. And traders are indeed 19 distrustful, hence the hedging of bets on all sides.

20 And while defendants may have owed Deutsche Bank a 21 fiduciary duty of acting in their employer's best interest, 22 they can hardly have been said to have abused that trust.
23 Defendants didn't put anything over on Deutsche Bank. What was 24 going on was no secret, and was -- from all the evidence I have 25 seen and heard -- encouraged, if not orchestrated, by senior

JAO7CONS

1 officials at the bank for the benefit of the bank. You can't 2 abuse the trust your employer places in you if your employer is 3 fully aware of and actively encourages what you are doing 4 because your employer believes that your actions will, if 5 successful, enhance its interests. Neither Mr. Connolly nor 6 Mr. Black advanced his own personal interest at the expense of 7 Deutsche Bank. And before anyone suggests that Deutsche Bank 8 was betrayed because it incurred untold millions of dollars in 9 penalties and legal fees to clear up this mess, I reject the 10 notion that this can or should be laid at the feet of Matt
11 Connolly and Gavin Black. The very idea of Deutsche Bank as a 12 victim in this scenario is absurd to me.

13 As further proof that the abuse of trust enhancement 14 is not warranted, let us consider that Gavin Black continued to 15 work at Deutsche Bank for seven years after the Wall Street 16 Journal first published rumors about LIBOR manipulation and 17 through five years of intensive investigation by the Paul Weiss 18 law firm. Moreover, it appears he would have continued to be 19 employed by Deutsche Bank but for the insistence of the New 20 York State Department of Finance that he specifically be fired.
21 If at any time during the course of a five year investigation 22 that was costing it millions of dollars Deutsche Bank felt that 23 Gavin Black had abused its trust, it would hardly have kept him 24 on as an employee. Financial institutions are not in 25 eleemosynary in nature. People who are caught abusing the

1 trust of the institution are cut loose at the earliest 2 opportunity, and the institution does not need to wait for a 3 command from the government to get rid of them.

4 The government also seeks three-point enhancement for 5 Mr. Connolly on the ground that he acted as a manager and 6 supervisor of the criminal activity. The basis for this 7 request is that Mr. Connolly "set himself apart by explicitly 8 directing his subordinate Mr. Parietti to make manipulation 9 requests on behalf of Deutsche Bank's pool trading desk in New 10 York."

11 Probation declined to apply the enhancement. I agree 12 wholeheartedly with Officer Kim's assessment of the matter, 13 albeit for somewhat different reasons.

14 I was unable to discharge myself of my opinion about 15 Mr. Parietti at his sentencing. That's because Judge 16 Engelmayer sentenced Mr. Parietti. He did so because the 17 government failed to do what has been the practice in this 18 district for longer than I have been on this bench -- it failed 19 to notify both the judge who took Mr. Parietti's plea and the 20 judge who heard the man testify so that they, judge to judge, 21 could decide which judge was better positioned to sentence the 22 cooperator.

23 Judge Engelmayer asked the government about this at 24 Mr. Parietti's sentencing, because he was mystified that no 25 such letter had been sent and that I was unaware that Mr.

JAO7CONS

1 Parietti was about to be sentenced -- which I was, totally and 2 completely unaware.

3 Ms. Brown, I believe you have never been an assistant 4 in this district; is that correct?

5 MS. BROWN: That is correct, your Honor.

6 THE COURT: Ms. Brown stood up and said she thought I
7 was aware that Judge Engelmayer was going to sentence Mr.
8 Parietti, and that the team misunderstood my level of 9 understanding about what was going on, and that the government 10 was not engaged in judge shopping. Ms. Sipperly and 11 Ms. Anderson -- both veteran prosecutors who served as 12 assistant United States Attorneys in this district for many 13 years -- not Ms. Anderson -- Ms. Sipperly. I apologize. I 14 apologize, Ms. Anderson -- sat silently and said nothing in 15 response to Judge Engelmayer's question, which, by the way,
16 which was "Why didn't you send Judge McMahon and me a letter?"
17 Not "What was your understanding of Judge McMahon's state of 18 mind?"

19 MS. SIPPERLY: I was sitting right next --

20 THE COURT: Sit down, Ms. Sipperly. My turn.

21 And so we come to the concept of quibbling. Quibbling 22 is saying something that is less than a lie but not quite the 23 truth. It is lying by evasion. It's a concept that would have 24 been quite familiar to Mr. Parietti because he was a West 25 Pointer, and quibbling is quite explicitly a violation of the

1 West Point Cadet's Honor Code in which a cadet promises not to 2 lie, cheat or steal, or tolerate those who do -- something Mr.
3 Parietti did repeatedly for many years.

4 In responding to Judge Engelmayer -- and I put this 5 charitably -- the government at the very least quibbled. Or, 6 if I may rephrase what I just said in language that's probably 7 more familiar to federal prosecutors, the government in the 8 person of Ms. Brown -- who knew nothing -- omitted to state
9 something necessary to make her response to Judge Engelmayer's 10 question not misleading. I wish I could say it was the first 11 such instance of at the very list quibbling by the government 12 during the course of this case, but the trial record reveals 13 that it was not.

14 In my opinion, Mr. Parietti -- who, per Agent
15 McGillicuddy's intended loss data was the most prolific
16 requester of LIBOR manipulation in all of Deutsche Bank -- 41 17 of the 130 written requests totaling almost $650,000 of the 18 government's calculation of intended loss from those 19 requests -- vastly more -- vastly more than either of the 20 defendants here -- was guilty of at least quibbling and quite 21 possibly outright lying at several points during his testimony.
22 The jurors were free to believe him or to disbelieve him, and 23 on my reading of the verdict sheet they did not believe him.
24 Mr. Connolly was acquitted an Counts Eight and Ten, both of 25 which involved submission requests made by Mr. Parietti. He

JAO7CONS

1 was even acquitted on a count where the submission request was 2 allegedly made by him. But he was acquitted in both instances 3 where the submitting conduct was attributable to his so-called 4 subordinate Mr. Parietti.

5 Mr. Connolly was not a manager or a supervisor of the 6 LIBOR manipulation scheme. The evidence clearly showed that 7 the scheme was run out of London, and Connolly had very little 8 to do with LIBOR as part of his job. To my ears, after sitting 9 on this case for three years, Matt Connolly was the person who 10 had the least to do with the manipulation of LIBOR in all of 11 Deutsche Bank -- certainly, of all the actors with which I 12 became acquainted. The evidence does not support the 13 government's contention that Mr. Connolly was by virtue of his 14 nominal supervision of the trading desk at Deutsche Bank in a 15 position to stop LIBOR manipulation that was taking place out 16 of the London office of Deutsche Bank where he did not work and 17 did not supervise anyone. Many persons who were in a position 18 to stop what was going on -- some of whom were deeply involved
19 in the activity while at Deutsche Bank, others who tolerated
20 it -- were not indicted. The evidence from Mr. Parietti, I 21 believe, was to the effect that senior management at the bank
22 directed this activity. This part of his testimony I believe.
23 I don't believe he did what he did because Matt Connolly told 24 him to -- and neither did the jury -- but I do believe his 25 testimony that senior management at the bank directed this

JAO7CONS

1 activity. And Matt Connolly was not part of the senior 2 management at Deutsche Bank.

3 He was not unaware of what was going on. He was aware 4 as far back as 2005 of what was going on. I can cite 5 Government Exhibit 1-023. And he did participate in the 6 conspiracy to a very limited extent of making a total of six 7 written submissions, but he was anything but a manager or a 8 supervisor.

9 I note that the government did not argue for such an 10 enhancement for Michael Curtler, who actually was a manager or 11 supervisor of the scheme, and who had the undoubted power to 12 stop it just by saying no and refusing to entertain the 13 requests of his coworkers. Officer Kim rightly picked up on 14 this discrepancy in recommending that I not apply this 15 enhancement. I will be guided by his advice. Mr. Connolly 16 will be punished for his conduct and his conduct alone; he will 17 not be punished instead of punishing Mr. Parietti or Mr.
18 Curtler, and he will not be punished for their conduct; and he 19 will not be punished for going to trial, which is what the 20 government seeks by not enhancing the guideline of a cooperator 21 who was manifestly was a manager but trying to enhance the 22 guidelines of a noncooperator who was not.

23 Now we come to the most ridiculous part of this 24 exercise which was the calculation of the intended loss amount.

25 In the real world, which is to say, the pre-guidelines

JAO7CONS

1 world, the judges would simply recognize what was obvious: It
2 was the intent of the defendants and their coconspirators it 3 make all the money they possibly could from trading, and that 4 money necessarily had to be made at the expense of the 5 counterparties to their trade. And while the actual loss in 6 this case cannot possibly be calculated -- it is impossible to 7 calculate -- the government concedes as much -- the effort to 8 swing LIBOR fix in a particular favorable direction went on for 9 years, and there were billions of dollars in trades during that 10 period, and it is inevitable that Deutsche Bank benefited on 11 some of those trades as a result of tainted fixes submitted by 12 its traders that swung LIBOR in a particular direction for a 13 particular tenor on a particular day. I can't prove which 14 ones, but I can't help but think of this whole endeavor as some 15 financial services version of the so-called infinite monkey 16 theorem: Hit keys at random long enough and the monkey will 17 eventually recreate the works of Shakespeare.

18 That is the essence of the LIBOR scheme. It all came 19 out in the wash, because the other submitting banks were doing 20 exactly the same thing to try to benefit their trading 21 positions, including banks that were counterparties to Deutsche 22 Bank, and everyone, including people who did not work for the 23 submitter banks, hedged their bets because nobody trusted 24 anybody. And since many of the other submitting banks were 25 doing the same thing that Deutsche Bank was doing -- on some

JAO7CONS

1 occasions shading a submission -- Deutsche Bank's efforts on 2 behalf of its traders had to have been canceled out in many 3 instances by the efforts of other banks. But that does not 4 mean that there was no intended loss.

5 I agree with the government's contention that this was 6 not a victimless crime. Defendants hoped to benefit Deutche 7 Bank's trades to the detriment of its counterparties. The 8 swaps market is indeed a zero sum market, and if the 9 coconspirators were not trying to win at trades vis a vis 10 counterparties, there would have been no reason for the cash 11 traders to communicate their desires to the LIBOR submitters.
12 Traders do things that they think will in the end make them
13 money. They do not waste their time doing things they don't 14 believe will make them money.

15 So, while each trade was worth just fractions of 16 pennies, and while it is the net value of the trader's book, 17 not any individual trade, that is ultimately relevant to the 18 bank's and the trader's bottom line, the intended loss -- the 19 amount of the intended loss -- was not zero.

20 A word needs to be said about the trim. The scheme 21 charged has always struck me as particularly unlikely to 22 achieve tremendous success -- except in the infinite monkey
23 theorem variety -- precisely because the participants had no 24 control over its likelihood of success. The BBA's formula for 25 calculating LIBOR for a particular currency at a particular

1 tenor -- the trim, the averaging of the eight middle 2 submissions out of the 16 total submissions -- was designed to 3 eliminate or minimize the ability of any one submitting bank to 4 manipulate the fix. There was simply no way for these 5 defendants and their fellow Deutsche Bank employees to 6 guarantee that a particular day's submission would move the fix 7 in a particular direction.

8 But that didn't stop the submitting banks -- including 9 Deutsche Bank -- from trying to move the fix. The reason they 10 tried to move the fix was to win at trades. It was a long shot 11 but, who knows, if everything lined up just right it just might 12 help. I therefore reject the notion that the existence of the 13 trim negates the possibility that the defendants intended any 14 loss.

15 The defense argues that the government has not met its 16 burden to prove the amount of intended loss. And the defense 17 is correct in the respect that because of the way the market 18 works, neither the government nor this Court can make an 19 accurate assessment of the amount that's properly attributable 20 to the defendants' scheme. The government candidly admits that 21 it cannot calculate actual loss; it does not have the 22 information that would be necessary to make such a calculation, 23 which would involve knowing things like the overall exposure of 24 the counterparty to LIBOR on any particular day on which 25 Deutsche's Bank's submission of a fix actually ended up moving

JAO7CONS

1 LIBOR in a particular direction. The government might have to 2 take into account counterparty hedging in order to calculate 3 actual loss, although it is correct that the defendants don't 4 get to benefit from those hedges, even though their knowledge 5 that everyone was hedging -- just as they were hedging -- is 6 part of any trader's daily calculus. The government would have 7 to take into account any manipulation of LIBOR by other banks
8 on the same day at the same tenor because only Deutsche Bank's 9 manipulation would matter for these defendants, and as 10 government acknowledged, this practice was widespread. Indeed, 11 at certain times, such as during the height of the 2008
12 financial crisis, submissions were actually being manipulated 13 at the request of the Bank of England.

14 So the government has come up with a proxy formula for 15 calculating intended loss. The government's methodology can be 16 attacked as inaccurate for all the reasons proffered by the 17 defendants. And as will be seen, I actually take issue with 18 some of what the government has done, but the government does 19 not need to prove intended loss with mathematical precision, 20 and the mere fact that it does not do so does not zero out
21 intended loss.

22 Now, the usual thing that happens in cases like this 23 is that the Court accepts the government's calculation of 24 intended loss amount all the while bemoaning its inadequacy -- 25 as Judge Rakoff did at the Rabobank sentencing -- and then

1 proceeds to ignore the resulting guideline, which is always 2 astronomically high, and sentences on some far more rational 3 basis. It's a wonder to me that district judges should be put 4 in this position, but we are.

5 I have looked at the government's calculation. I have 6 tried to address some things in it that I found troubling. In 7 so doing I took into account the November 2015 amendment to the 8 guideline. Mr. Koenig is correct, contrary to the defendants'
9 argument, Section 2B1.1, comment note 3 (A)(ii) did not work a 10 radical change to the intended loss guidelines in the context 11 of conspiracies or limit the intended loss calculation to 12 losses related to the conduct of a particular defendant. I 13 don't deny that the conduct attributable to a particular 14 defendant is -- and for me always is -- an important factor in 15 the sentence that is imposed, but the amendment in 2015 did not 16 make it impossible to consider the losses of coconspirators or 17 the actions of coconspirators in doing an intended loss 18 calculation.

19 The amendment clarified that the sentencing court had 20 to make a subjective inquiry into the amount of loss intended 21 by the defendant -- whether through his own acts or the acts of 22 his coconspirators -- rather than relying on some sort of 23 objective test, which had apparently been the law in some 24 circuits.

25 That the amendment of Section 2B1.1 did nothing more

JAO7CONS

1 than what I just said is underscored by the fact that at the 2 very same time the Commission also amended Section 1B1.3 of the 3 guidelines concerning jointly undertaken criminal activity.
4 That amendment stated that a defendant could be held 5 accountable for the conduct of others in a jointly undertaken 6 criminal enterprise if the conduct fell within the scope of the 7 enterprise, the conduct of others was in furtherance of that 8 criminal activity, and the conduct of others was reasonably 9 foreseeable to the defendant. The Commission specifically 10 noted this amendment was "not intended as a substantive change 11 in policy." The amendment to Section 2B must be read in the 12 context of this statement made simultaneously by the 13 Commission.

14 Finally, I found no Second Circuit law suggesting that 15 anything changed after November of 2015, which itself suggests 16 that the 2015 amendments were not as portentous as the 17 defendants insist they were. I know that the Eleventh Circuit 18 has at least on one occasion resisted the siren call of 19 limiting intended loss in connection with jointly undertaken 20 criminal activity to the portion of loss that was caused by the 21 defendant's own actions rather than those of his 22 coconspirators. That was in United States v. Leyva, 752 Fed.
23 App'x 825, a 2018 case from the Eleventh Circuit.

24 So I cannot agree with the defense that the government 25 is not allowed to include the activities of other traders who

JAO7CONS

1 asked Messrs. King and Curtler to move Deutsche Bank's 2 submissions under the Gavin Black intended loss umbrella or the 3 Matt Connolly intended loss umbrella. All the testimony at 4 trial was to the effect that everyone knew what was going on 5 and everyone to a greater or lesser degree participated -- with 6 many traders making occasional requests and with Mr. Parietti 7 making the most by a wide margin, and not at the direction of 8 Mr. Connolly. They were all in it together. Deutsche Bank 9 coconspirators intended to benefit their collective trading
10 positions to the detriment of their counterparties. Thus, it 11 is entirely reasonable to hold these two defendants responsible 12 for the collective intended loss, and there is no need to 13 resort to some "they wanted to enhance the bonus pool"
14 argument, as to which there is no evidence other than Mr.
15 Parietti's statement, which appears to have been injected into 16 his testimony by the government, and which I don't believe.

17 The government has identified 130 instances starting 18 on February 21, 2005 and ending on March 17, 2010, in which 19 Deutsche Bank traders in the U.S., London and on the Continent
20 made written requests to the Deutsche Bank submitter to skew 21 the USD fix, on dates in which Deutsche Bank's submission was 22 one of the eight submissions that survived the trim. 16 of 23 those written requests, with the government-estimated intended 24 loss amount totaling $166,740.41, were made by Mr. Black; six 25 with an intended loss amount of $47,036.39, per the

JAO7CONS

1 government's formula, were made by Mr. Connolly. 43 of the 130
2 requests occurred after Mr. Connolly left Deutsche Bank. He 3 withdrew from the conspiracy, and they will not be factored 4 into his intended loss amount. Additionally, two more which 5 relate to four or five trades of Mr. Parietti's, relate to 6 counts of acquittal, and I don't sentence people for conduct 7 for which they were acquitted, even if it was part of the 8 conspiracy, and those too must be backed out. All 130 will be 9 factored into Mr. Black's intended loss amount because he at 10 all relevant times worked at Deutsche Bank.

11 Now, there was testimony that requests were 12 occasionally made orally, not by mail. The government has 13 invented 74 oral requests, of which there are by definition no 14 record -- they cannot be tied to specific dates, they cannot be 15 tied to requesters, or to any certainty that Deutsche Bank was 16 one of the eight submissions surviving the trim. And the 17 government uses the average of all 130 written requests as a 18 proxy for the amount by which these hypothetical requests led 19 to an intended loss, which is itself problematic as the 20 intended loss numbers assigned to the 130 written requests 21 range from zero on four days attributable to Mr. Black to 22 $261,000, and including the two or three very large intended 23 loss days in the calculation with a whole lot of smaller 24 numbers wildly inflates the bottom line.

25 I am unconvinced by the government's presentation.

JAO7CONS

1 The government is required to prove intended loss by evidence
2 that is reliable and specific, and while it need not be proved 3 with precision, I cannot use the kind of hypothetical numbers 4 relating to hypothetical conversations as a basis on which to 5 sentence these two men. Moreover, lacking dates, I cannot 6 account for Mr. Connolly's departure from the bank's employ.
7 And as he did not work in London, and there is no evidence that 8 he or anybody else ever made a request by telephone, I can't 9 attribute any of the verbal requests to Mr. Connolly. I thus 10 decline to rely on any of the 74 verbal requests in calculating 11 intended loss for either defendant.

12 Mr. Black argues that the government cannot even 13 reliably calculate the intended loss to his counterparties 14 because it cannot reliably identify his trades let alone his 15 net position. To support his argument, he relies on the 16 government's admission that Deutsche Bank's book-to-trader 17 mapping and the corresponding net notional analyses were so 18 imperfect that the government could not rely on them at trial.

19 The government did indeed admit that these analyses 20 "may well be unreasonable and inadmissible," and it is tempting 21 to hoist the government on its own petard. However, it is the 22 case that intended loss calculation need not rely on evidence 23 that would have been admissible at trial, and that the 24 defendant cannot avoid an intended loss calculation that relies 25 on the best data available -- even if the data is incomplete.

JAO7CONS

1 I equally reject the defense argument that the 2 defendants could have intended no loss because even if an 3 alleged counterparty victim lost a small amount of money on a 4 particular swap as a result of an alleged request, it likely 5 earned offsetting profits on other swaps transactions.
6 Defendants are not entitled to benefit from hedges that 7 counterparties fortuitously happened to have. Perhaps in an 8 actual loss scenario they might get a credit, but certainly not 9 in an intended loss scenario.

10 So, I will calculate intended loss by applying the 11 government's methodology as set out at pages 15-16 of its 12 sentencing memorandum and in Special Agent McGillicuddy's 13 affirmation to the 130 written requests in the case of 14 Mr. Black and to fewer than 87 of the 130 requests in 15 Mr. Connolly's case, because I have to back out the counts of 16 acquittal. I acknowledge that the government's formula is far 17 from perfect. It is a Rube Goldberg sort of algorithm. But 18 the guidelines do not require accuracy; they require that there 19 be a reason for the algorithm. And the government has come up 20 with a methodology that works for me, given my conclusion that 21 some loss was intended.

22 The government will no doubt protest that the Court's 23 calculation understates the culpability of these defendants, 24 especially Mr. Black. Indeed, the government argues 25 vociferously that its $4.7 million estimate understates their

JAO7CONS

1 culpability. To which I say this on the subject of loss:
2 After hearing all the evidence in this case, my best guess is 3 that Mr. Black and Mr. Connolly, and the whole crew at Deutsche 4 Bank, and at Bank of America, and Rabobank, and at Citibank, 5 and everywhere else, were acting so much at cross purposes that 6 if we could actually reconstruct the losses suffered in 7 connection with trades done by all of the cash traders at 8 submitting banks, they would end up canceling each other out, 9 which means the ultimate actual loss from the scheme would be 10 negligible if it existed at all.

11 This does not excuse or cancel out the misbehavior 12 that was committed here. It does, however, suggest that the 13 government's $4.7 million intended loss number for these two 14 defendants -- and even the somewhat lower number that I have 15 calculated -- is way out of line with any actual loss that may 16 have been suffered by anyone.

17 The ten victim enhancement will not be imposed.
18 United States v. Skys, the Second Circuit, made it perfectly 19 clear that a victim for purposes of this enhancement must be 20 someone who suffers actual loss. The government has attempted 21 to prove actual loss for ten people. I am unconvinced that the 22 government can prove actual loss for anyone in this case in any 23 instance. I cannot and will not rely on those numbers.
24 Furthermore, since I do not intend to issue a guideline 25 sentence in this case, it would be a waste of time to have the

JAO7CONS

1 Fatico hearing to which Mr. Levine would undoubtedly be 2 entitled if I were to do anything other than decide not to 3 impose that particular enhancement.

4 Mr. Black's guidelines calculation is, therefore as 5 follows: Base offense level 7, intended loss from the 6 conspiracy totaling $2,613,214, which leads to a 16 point 7 enhancement under the utterly ridiculous fraud guidelines chart
8 at 2B1.1(i), a two point enhancement for sophisticated means, 9 for a total offense level of 25. His Criminal History Category 10 is I; guideline range 57 to 71 months, much of which is 11 attributable to the fact that the fraud enhancement chart is 12 heavily weighted toward increasing the number of enhancement 13 points at the lower end -- a fact that has been criticized on 14 more than one occasion by this and other courts and has always 15 made me highly skeptical of the chart.

16 I note that the government's estimate of loss -- the 17 government's estimate -- not Mr. Levine's estimate -- but the 18 government's estimate of loss actually attributable to 19 Mr. Black would not add 16 points but would add 12, because it
20 would be under subsection G, and it's just above subsection F 21 which tops out at 150,000, which would add ten points. This 22 chart is just so ridiculous it's incomprehensible.

23 Probation recommends that Mr. Black serve a period of 24 five months' incarceration followed by two years of supervised 25 release, and that he pay a fine of $300,000.

JAO7CONS

1 I now turn to Mr. Connolly. The government has 2 behaved throughout this prosecution as though Mr. Connolly and 3 Mr. Black are in exactly same position. From where I sit 4 they're not. For one thing, Mr. Connolly left Deutsche Bank in 5 early 2008. Yet the government inexplicably assigns the exact
6 same loss amount to him as to Mr. Black, who remained employed 7 at Deutsche Bank for another seven years, including the last 8 two years of the alleged scheme.

9 43 of the written requests on the government's chart 10 occurred after Connolly left the bank, and so withdrew from the 11 conspiracy as far as this Court is concerned. I will not 12 include them in calculating his total intended loss, which 13 deducts $1,128,803.03 from the intended loss amount that was 14 applied to Mr. Black. And I am also deducting the amounts 15 relating to Counts Eight and Ten, which are the counts of 16 acquittal. So, the amount comes out to $1,411,733.73.

17 Mr. Connolly's total offense level is calculated as 18 follows: Seven points for the base offense level, 14 point 19 enhancement for the intended loss of $1.411 million. His much 20 lesser intended loss amount doesn't give him much credit under 21 the fraud chart, and even that is extraordinarily excessive. I 22 want to do the same exercise for him that I just did for 23 Mr. Black. $46,000 is attributable to requests made by him.
24 That's a six point add, not a 14 point add. A two point 25 enhancement for sophisticated means. Total offense level of

1 23, Criminal History Category I, guidelines 46 to 57 months.

2 Again, probation treating him in the same way as 3 Mr. Black was treated recommends a five month sentence followed 4 by two years supervised release and a $300,000 fine.

5 OK, you all have your exceptions.

6 Yes, I did. I said seven points for the base offense,
7 14 point enhancement for 2B1.1(b) for intended loss of $1.411 8 million, which is much in excess of the six point add-on for 9 what he actually did. OK?

10 All right. So, now we've gone through that exercise, 11 and I have told you that I don't intend to give a guideline 12 sentence -- and I don't. So, I guess I'll hear the government 13 on sentencing.

14 MR. KOENIG: Thank you, your Honor. I won't be long.
15 In spite of what the Court said about the difficulty in 16 estimating loss, what the defendants engaged in was a big 17 deal -- it was a really big deal. They had privileged access 18 to the very, very important financial benchmark, and they 19 abused it. And this wasn't just slip some money out of the 20 church collection plate. This was something where the harm
21 went beyond Deutsche Bank and their counterparties. So, you 22 know, were they the only ones to do it? No. But their conduct 23 was significant and it cannot be ignored. It went on for 24 years, and it went on over and over. So, a significant period 25 of incarceration and a significant fine will send a message

JAO7CONS

1 that that kind of conduct will not be tolerated, and it also 2 will change the calculus for anybody who is out there who 3 thinks that maybe I should engage in a fraud.

4 THE COURT: How succinct.

5 MR. KOENIG: Thank you.

6 THE COURT: I thank the government.

7 Mr. Breen?

8 MR. BREEN: Your Honor, as the Court has recognized, 9 the guideline calculation is wildly skewed.

10 THE COURT: Yes, whatever it is, I'm not applying it, 11 so let's talk about your client.

12 MR. BREEN: OK. You saw the letters we submitted on 13 behalf of Mr. Connolly. You know that he is a loving family 14 person committed to his family, his children, his wife. He is 15 the backbone of that close-knit family and his extended family 16 as well, his sisters, his brothers, his nieces and nephews. He 17 is a humble man and has shown that he is not a flashy Wall 18 Street person; he is somebody who went and did his job until he 19 left it. He is somebody whose family cares for him deeply and 20 who need him around. I think that should count in your 21 consideration.

22 In terms of the sentence here, the vast number of 23 people who have been sentenced in the LIBOR cases have gotten 24 very little or no time. And some of those people -- you know, 25 the example of the person who received the most as somebody who

JAO7CONS

1 had -- the spider network guy, the book, had people at 2 different banks, and they were moving rates by working together 3 and colluding and doing all those things, you know, that's not 4 really an example that has any relevance here.

5 Out of all the defendants in all the cases, we 6 struggle to find anybody whose conduct was as narrow as 7 Mr. Connolly's -- you know, people who were actively involved.
8 I think to the extent that Mr. Parietti talked about Matt
9 Connolly being his boss was unbelievable, I think, to the jury.

10 THE COURT: Well, you you've already heard what I 11 think of it. And I read into the jury's acquittal on the 12 Parietti counts that the jury didn't believe it either.

13 MR. BREEN: Because they didn't believe that, I mean 14 what is there to believe about what Matt Connolly did? It's 15 only his own e-mails, right?

16 THE COURT: Well, his own e-mails are his own e-mails, 17 you know.

18 MR. BREEN: And the jury convicted him presumably on 19 his own e-mails, but that's really it. The rest of the scheme 20 should be viewed as acquitted conduct for that reason.

21 THE COURT: Well, no, come on, he was convicted of 22 conspiracy.

23 MR. BREEN: Well, he was. Technically he was.

24 THE COURT: He was convicted of conspiracy.

25 MR. BREEN: But he wasn't convicted of anybody else's

1 conduct.

2 THE COURT: I agree with you that his participation in 3 this conspiracy was -- as far as my reading of the evidence is 4 concerned -- negligible, far smaller than that of anybody else
5 at Deutsche Bank. And I've kind of scoured the Rabobank stuff,
6 and it appears to be a lot less than anybody at Rabobank. I
7 haven't kept track of what was going on in the London cases. I
8 know some people got off, and I know some people got small 9 sentences, and there is some guy who committed obstruction of 10 justice and bribed people, and he got five and a half years 11 apparently.

12 MR. BREEN: Right. Of course none of that -- and that 13 was our review too.

14 THE COURT: And on the great scheme of things if he is 15 like the worst person in the whole thing, Mr. Connolly is down 16 here, I will grant you that. OK?

17 MR. BREEN: So, your Honor, we ask that he be 18 sentenced appropriately, given that, and that he be sentenced 19 to a period of nonincarceration and a modest fine. I think 20 there is eight out of 24 of the defendants who received no time 21 at all, nonincarceratory sentences. Granted, some of those 22 were cooperators, we understand that, but, you know, 23 cooperators who on that scale are at the highest level
24 receiving no time. The government's request for a fine of $3 25 million is that's just hugely disproportional, and I think the

JAO7CONS

1 request for any time at all is disproportional. So, we ask for 2 a nonincarceratory sentence and a modest fine.

3 THE COURT: Thank you, Mr. Breen.

4 Mr. Levine?

5 MR. LEVINE: May I speak from here, your Honor.

6 THE COURT: You always did.

7 MR. LEVINE: Thank you very much.

8 THE COURT: I think of that as your spot in my 9 courtroom.

10 MR. LEVINE: Your Honor, the purpose of today is 11 punishment. That's what we're here for. Mr. Black respects 12 this country's legal process, he respects what is going to 13 happen here today, and just as he has years ago since years ago
14 when he agreed to come here and waive extradition --

15 THE COURT: Mr. Levine, you are going to have to move 16 over there. Either speak up or use the microphone. Shout.

17 MR. LEVINE: What I was saying, your Honor, was 18 that -- I will start again, to make sure you've heard it.

19 THE COURT: I heard it.

20 MR. LEVINE: OK. The point is that Mr. Black has 21 subjected himself to the jurisdiction of this court and 22 respects this process. I hope given the special health 23 circumstances that Mr. Black is going through that the Court 24 appreciates -- I'm sure you do -- that he has come today, not 25 sought an adjournment, and done everything he could to be in

1 this court today.

2 We ask today for only one thing, and that is fair,
3 proportionate and just punishment. And obviously the standard 4 here is what punishment is sufficient but not greater than 5 necessary to achieve the ends of sentencing. And our 6 recommendation, the Court knows -- which we spent considerable 7 time on, recognizing the seriousness and the nature of this 8 case -- is that the appropriate sentence that is certainly 9 sufficient would be to sentence Mr. Black to a term of 10 supervised release, with a special condition potentially of 11 home confinement. And as we outlined to the Court, we have 12 made efforts to ensure that that home confinement can be served 13 on the same terms as served in the United States, including 14 electronic monitoring or any other kind of circumstance the 15 Court deems appropriate to provide Mr. Black an equal 16 opportunity to the same sentences that he would have if he was 17 a United States resident.

18 How do we get there? Well, we start where I imagine 19 the Court would like to start, the work of the probation
20 department and Mr. Kim. And obviously there is a wide range 21 here of available sentences, and after thoughtful 22 consideration, professional consideration, you know, Mr. Kim 23 and the probation department as a whole determined that this 24 sentence should fall at the very low end of the range of 25 sentences that are available, a short period of incarceration

JAO7CONS

1 in the United States followed by supervised release and 2 substantial fine.

3 While we agree with probation in terms of where you 4 situate the appropriate place to sentence in this case, we 5 think they have that right, and we think it's based on 6 obviously you have seen the factors included in their 7 recommendation, which includes disparate impact, the conduct 8 and looking at this, stepping become a little bit and looking 9 at this whole picture.

10 And there is a meaningful difference obviously between 11 what we're asking for and what probation recommends, because we 12 are recommending if there is a form of confinement it should be 13 in the United Kingdom where Mr. Black is from. I recognize 14 there is hey difference between that and institutional
15 confinement -- there is no question. What we think -- and I 16 will talk about it a little today -- that when you factor in 17 all that happened, the punishment that will be meted out by the 18 court, and the other factors, including health factors and 19 issues of non-U.S. resident being incarcerated, the other 20 situations including the complete loss of Mr. Black's career, 21 the public shaming that has occurred, and other factors, that 22 that modest change -- and it is a modest change -- is fully and 23 wholly justified here, because it still provides more than a 24 sufficient sentence.

25 You know, I think, your Honor, that just starting out

JAO7CONS

1 with going through the factors, there is no dispute here that 2 Mr. Black is a first-time offender. There is obviously no
3 violence or public threat here. There is no history of any 4 misconduct. In fact, the probation department notes -- and I
5 will talk about the letters in a bit -- but you have other 6 evidence that Mr. Black has otherwise lived a well-lived, law
7 abiding, and in many respects very laudable life. We are not 8 making any excuses today, but I'm simply asking that Mr. Black 9 be sentenced -- as I know the Court will -- based as an entire 10 human being and how he has behaved for the years he has been on 11 this earth, and not just based on the verdict, which is the 12 worst thing he has done.

13 There is clearly no question that Mr. Black is someone 14 who can conform his conduct to the law, which is an important 15 factor here. He has been on bail now for over three years.
16 Those conditions -- which has been agreed by everyone -- and he 17 has had no issues whatsoever. And that includes that fact that 18 we've all adjudged he didn't even need to be supervised; he has 19 traveled back and forth to the United States frequently in 20 fact. He's been here every time. There is no issue about his 21 conduct or any other reason that there is a concern about 22 antisocial behavior, which obviously this Court has to consider 23 in making a determination.

24 Similarly, the probation department clearly says it 25 believes there is no risk of recidivism here; there is no

JAO7CONS

1 concern that he needs to be personally deterred.

2 You know, you have already commented on these things, 3 so I'm not going to go through them all, but just looking at 4 the case, we're not offering any excuses today. We gave you a 5 view of this case but the jury spoke, and we certainly 6 understand that.

7 As you said, Mr. Black behaved within a system of 8 Deutsche Bank, but this conduct was not limited to him; it was 9 obviously part of not only this bank but many, many banks. It 10 was encouraged, it was not concealed. And also very 11 importantly, although Mr. Black was in London, he of course was 12 not only a submitter, but he had no ability to control the 13 submissions, he had no ability to input the submissions; those 14 decisions were made by those senior to him, and frankly his 15 requests to be rejected.

16 So, I would say when you look at across the board, 17 Mr. Black's conduct also falls -- you know, of all the people, 18 of all the LIBOR gin joints in this particular case -- and 19 there are dozens and dozens and scores of people that are 20 involved, according to government -- Mr. Black is on the very, 21 very low end, in fact in this case, the very, very bottom of 22 that.

23 The task force has thought about offenders like this.
24 The guideline comment from 2018, we respectfully submit that at 25 least with respect to how we think about the loss -- and I'm

JAO7CONS

1 not challenging the court's ruling -- we think he really is of 2 the type of offender, first time conduct, otherwise no reasons
3 to believe he will reoffend, that should be the kind of person
4 in which a term of nonincarceration should be seriously
5 considered. I say nonincarceration. There is no doubt about 6 punishment. Mr. Black has and will be punished here, punished
7 very severely. The only question is how much is needed.

8 You commented on this a little, Judge, but I want to 9 talk about one factor that I really think looms incredibly 10 large here, and that is the requirements under 3553 to not 11 impose sentences that have disparate effect.

12 Plainly for Deutsche Bank for this part nobody is 13 suffering a sentence of imprisonment. The more senior folks, 14 the decision makers, we have Mr. Curtler, he obviously has been 15 sentenced to a nonincarceratory term; Mr. King, who is a 16 decision maker, the recommendation notes Mr. King's role. It's 17 not a question of imprisonment. He obviously has not been 18 charged at all. He hasn't suffered any penalty whatsoever 19 other than the fact that he had to come and testify. That's 20 very significant because this is a case which is not common 21 where the government cooperated down quite frankly.

22 THE COURT: You think it's not common? You should do 23 more drug cases, Mr. Levine.

24 MR. LEVINE: Well, when I did drug cases, I didn't do 25 that.

JAO7CONS

1 Mr. Parietti also -- who as the Court pointed out had 2 a very robust -- under the government's analysis -- set of 3 requests, he also is facing no time of incarceration. But that 4 only begins to tell the disparate story.

5 As this Court has noted today, and as the government's 6 own settlement with Deutsche Bank notes -- and frankly as the 7 testimony notes -- this is not about just Mr. Black. He is a 8 trader on the desk. You have the senior folks -- including 9 senior folks that are listed on this loss -- Mr. Nichols, 10 Mr. Clody, Mr. Jane, the entire Deutsche Bank organization -- 11 that are absolutely responsible, I would argue much more 12 culpable than Mr. Black.

13 I'm not making any excuse today for his conduct, but 14 I'm saying let's look at the context. Those people, they're 15 not thinking about prison, they're thinking about nothing.
16 There is no sanction to them of a criminal nature at all. So, 17 Mr. Black is already going to absorb an enormous amount of 18 punishment that the people that one who think the government 19 would find more culpable are walking away with nothing.

20 Which brings me to the chart we talked about before, 21 the people that you've looked at for loss. There is a couple 22 of observations I'd like to make, your Honor, because we also 23 know that Deutsche Bank did a massive investigation. They 24 fired lots of people -- not Mr. Black. He sat on the desk 25 trading for years. But even if you look at their chart, your

JAO7CONS

1 Honor, the disparate impact is difficult to not consider. For 2 example, on the chart we have Ms. Mackler and a man named 3 Pasquele Fluant. They're not coconspirators. They're not on 4 the government's list of coconspirators. But their losses are 5 nonetheless attributed -- not only are they not charged, 6 they're not even conspirators. And I note that Ms. Mackler has 7 a loss of almost the identical amount as Mr. Black. OK, we're 8 not talking about the culpability here, we're talking about 9 relative punishment, no charge.

10 Mr. Rickman on the chart, he is a coconspirator, 11 $363,000 of loss, not charged, will face no sanction.
12 Mr. Nichols will face no sanction. Mr. Pastorella, he was 13 actually someone who shared a trading book with Mr. Black. He 14 is on this chart, again no sanction whatsoever.

15 So, I'm not here arguing, Judge, or asking do not 16 punish Mr. Black. You should punish him today under our system
17 and on this stage. But what I'm saying is basic fairness 18 informs that the way that this is being done is that 19 Mr. Black's culpability is taken into account. But none of 20 these other folks who the government even says are how you get 21 to this harm.

22 Now, of course our view is that because the different 23 traders didn't know each other's net positions, it's hard to 24 say Mr. Black knew anything that should be attributed by these 25 other people, because he doesn't know what their position is,

JAO7CONS

1 so their requests don't necessarily affect him. But, fine, all 2 I'm saying is none of these folks are going to get any 3 punishment.

4 If you look at it, 65 percent of the chart is the 5 cooperators. If you include Mr. King in the noncharged people, 6 that's 36 percent of the charge. So, you are talking about 7 Mr. Black has six percent of it. OK. If you're going to mete 8 out punishment, I'm just saying it needs to be proportionate to 9 that. Now that also does not take into account.

10 You have seen Rabo. I'm he happy to talk about Rabo.
11 None of the people that went to trial are going to jail at all.
12 Whether that's right or wrong, that's the fact. And those 13 people were far more culpable; they were like Curtler and King; 14 they were submitters with decision making authority and 15 everything else.

16 Mr. Thompson who pled guilty, fought extradition up 17 the wazoo, got 60 days in prison after all that, couldn't be 18 tried with the Rabo folks; I don't think he is similarly 19 situated. The other Rabo people, no jail time, no jail time at 20 all.

21 THE COURT: Well, two of them because of the Kastigar 22 problem.

23 MR. LEVINE: But the point is if you're looking at it 24 relatively, I'm not here today to ask you not to punish 25 Mr. Black; I'm just asking you for proportional punish.

JAO7CONS

1 Then we move on to the other issue which the Court has 2 mentioned today: What about all of these other banks, 3 Barclays, Citibank? All have these agreements, those 4 agreements all reference numerous individuals -- depending on 5 which agreements you look at, 40 to 100 names. Not one -- not 6 traders, not senior executives, no one.

7 So, if I take Mr. Koenig's comments, you know, about 8 what we need to do here, there is no sense in which the 9 government's approach suggests that they believe that there is 10 the need for all of this punishment for these two frankly 11 base-level nonsupervisory folks that's going to somehow make 12 things better. I don't think that general deterrence as we 13 pointed out, and the DOJ said in our research, is achieved when 14 people have an interaction with law enforcement. The actual 15 punishment is not the key point. There is none of these 16 people -- I will make a wager, Judge, that if we contacted -- 17 if the government contacted all of the banks and said send us 18 to this courtroom right now every single one of those scores of 19 people that have not been prosecuted and asked them would you 20 change places with Mr. Black and Mr. Connolly, I think they're 21 going to say, oh, my God. I think the conduct has been 22 deterred.

23 Similarly, the government has always tried to suggest 24 that this is this very narrow piece of LIBOR conduct. They 25 don't want to talk about low balling; they want to talk about

JAO7CONS

1 the Bank of England. They don't want to talk about the actual 2 events during the crisis, because that leads to a massive 3 inquiry about the things that really did cause an issue for 4 LIBOR. OK, but you can't have it both ways. You can't make, 5 as they do in their papers, these guys the face of that, when 6 you recognize that even under their scenario this is not the 7 big case. This is conduct that should not have happened based 8 on the jury's verdict, but it is not the overall LIBOR story.
9 And that story the government has fought to not tell. That's 10 fine. We're still culpable based on the verdict, and we have 11 to answer for it, but let us answer for what we actually did 12 and not all of these other folks who the government decided not 13 to prosecute for conduct which is much more complicated and 14 more serious.

15 It is notable Mr. Black is not a man -- like a lot of 16 people -- he didn't have a lot of jobs; he basically had this 17 job. He sat on the desk for years. That career is completely 18 gone. Effectively he will never work in the financial services 19 industry again. It's going to be very difficult for him to 20 work. He hasn't worked since 2015. That is a very heavy 21 sanction for any person. It's not the end of it, but it is 22 ironic that Deutsche Bank did a whole investigation -- which 23 the government the Court has found had a hand in, and in their 24 judgment, even with all the pressure they were under, of all 25 the people they fired, including getting rid of Curtler and all

1 of these other guys, he is still sitting on his desk.

2 So, all I'm saying is in terms of relative 3 culpability, if you credit what Deutsche did -- because the 4 government sponsored it and they were going to put witnesses on 5 about it -- then credit it. And their view is of all the 6 people around here we're not going to fire him; we're going to 7 give him a letter. But who are we punishing? And how are we 8 punishing? Again I'm not making excuses; I'm talking about 9 relative culpability.

10 Now let me talk about what I really think come down to 11 the factors that ultimately I hope the Court will allow the 12 adjustment that we're asking for.

13 First, Mr. Black is, as you know, a noncitizen; he is 14 really a stranger in this country. He knows this country 15 because he has been spending a lot of time on this case. He 16 will not, based on the policy, be eligible to put in a camp or 17 another institution. He is going to be designated it appears 18 to a private prison facility. Obviously, this administration 19 has changed course from the previous administration in deciding 20 that that's something they want to do for noncitizens. We take 21 the Office of Inspector General's reports very seriously.
22 These places are very harsh. Mr. Black obviously is going to 23 be put in a facility which is higher security than he would be 24 designated simply because he happens to not be from the United 25 States. And there is more than a reasonable basis to believe

JAO7CONS

1 that Mr. Black will not obtain proper medical or other care in 2 such a facility. And we will talk about in a moment that 3 issue.

4 But in terms of disparate impact treatment, that's a 5 very harsh reality -- because of things that have nothing to do
6 other than the fact he was brought here as opposed to the UK -- 7 that Mr. Black should suffer an additional heaping of 8 punishment above what others will suffer in places that are 9 really not doing honor to our system.

10 Now, I understand that we have situations here and we 11 have other kinds of offenders that are not here, that are out 12 here, but there are limits to what the Court can do, and there 13 are other considerations -- safety and other things -- where we 14 have to use these kinds of places -- but it's not necessary for 15 Mr. Black, and I think respectfully it's not fair for 16 Mr. Black.

17 Also, there will be then an indeterminate period of 18 detention for removal, which of course is -- Mr. Black only 19 came here because he was asked to come here.

20 THE COURT: Well, it's actually a question I asked 21 myself. He is not illegally in the country.

22 MR. LEVINE: I will tell you there are some things 23 that one just has to sometimes -- I have to accept. And while 24 it makes no sense to me, and we will obviously consent to 25 removal, he is happy to leave now and not come back, but it's a

JAO7CONS

1 bureaucratic process that is one that is also, in addition to 2 being a difficult one -- right now overburdened in a way that 3 our country's immigration system has never been overburdened, 4 so adding another person who doesn't need to be in it I think 5 not only is harmful to Mr. Black -- because as you have also 6 seen the condition of some of these places is, as has been said 7 by the reports, deplorable, adding another body that doesn't 8 need to be there I think as a matter of social policy is also 9 not necessarily a positive good.

10 And with all of these issues, the other additional 11 heaping of cruelty here is that Mr. Black has nobody here
12 except us. He has no family here -- they're all overseas -- 13 and effectively he will not see them; he have no contact with 14 them.

15 I do thank two of Mr. Black's family members, his 16 sister and brother-in-law have really graced us to come here, 17 and we are really appreciative. But that's not going to be the 18 case if he is incarcerated, and that isolation is an additional 19 penalty which is over and above what I think is necessary.

20 Now, your Honor, I want to address the medical 21 condition, but I also have privacy concerns so I will do it
22 generally. I will be happy to answer more specific questions 23 at side bar.

24 We have a real problem. Mr. Black is one of those 25 clients who doesn't like to complain, who doesn't like to

JAO7CONS

1 necessarily tell us when he doesn't feel good because he feels 2 it's his job to sort of soldier on. But we have a real 3 problem; he has a serious heart condition.

4 I will tell you we have gone to great efforts to 5 advance appointments, but his current condition -- you've seen 6 the letters -- is not good. We are hopeful that it can be 7 brought under control. It's not right now. The procedures he 8 has had -- he has had two -- he is going to have a much more 9 serious procedure we think in about two months. That's sort of 10 where we are.

11 But, you know -- and having spoken to his doctors, 12 this is an existential problem. If not brought under control, 13 or if not given absolutely appropriate adequate care, this will 14 substantially reduce Mr. Black's life expectancy. One of our 15 biggest concerns here is just the possibility of not adequate 16 care, and there is a real risk of that.

17 Additionally, I will tell you Mr. Black is not the man 18 that we know. Even now he is walking, takes breaks and he has 19 a problem. I think it's not being cute to say this case has 20 literally broken his heart. He is ill; he is also dealing with 21 other nonphysical issues, which while not uncommon here are 22 nonetheless just as real, they're pronounced, and this has been 23 a difficult process. Therefore, we think our sentence is also 24 fully justified under the factor that allows for 25 rehabilitation -- as medical care is part of that

JAO7CONS

1 rehabilitation -- but we're asking frankly to not have 2 Mr. Black use resources in a U.S. facility for medical care but 3 he will obtain those resources at home in a way that his 4 doctors think is appropriate.

5 I can't tell you that I'm more concerned about 6 something in part because Mr. Black is not a person that 7 complains, but this is a real problem, and it manifests in a 8 lot of ways.

9 So, I think that those two factors alone, what we're 10 asking for here -- I'm not asking for him not to be punished or 11 pay a fine. I'm simply saying we can adequately confine him 12 and punish him in a way that is not unnecessarily difficult 13 both on the immigration side and frankly on the medical side.

14 And I think when you look at those factors -- and then 15 there is one other thing. I haven't said anything about it, 16 and this is really the last point I will make -- then I ask, as 17 I did at the beginning, look at this man as a whole. A lot of 18 defendants come before you -- I know you get dozens and dozens 19 of submissions -- but I respectfully think Mr. Black has lived 20 otherwise a very good life. The letters that you have received 21 that span really his whole life from people who have known him 22 for 40, 50 years all the way in time paint a remarkably 23 consistent picture of a man that is humble in the right sense.
24 He is caring and thoughtful and forthright with people.

25 And the letters are not, as you often see, a series of

JAO7CONS

1 platitudes; they are very specific repeated examples over a
2 long life of consistent behavior of frankly true thoughtfulness 3 and concern and doing what you do because it's the right thing, 4 not for praise. He is actually described by everyone as very 5 self-effacing, there is no bragging in him. And his dedication 6 to people as a father, as a husband, a son, brother, uncle and 7 as a friend is really I think, your Honor, special here.

8 You know, you see in these letters so many anecdotes 9 that to me it's not the big stuff, it's the little things he 10 does that shows who he is. He's the man that when your child 11 is having an emergency problem he's the one that's there to 12 help the child and help the parents. When there is a boy who 13 as a young man there was a young man challenged in the town, 14 he's the young man that brings him to the game to get him
15 involved to change his life. He's the guy who doesn't forget 16 his old mates in his town just because he is now a banker. He 17 is there to play with them in part of their crew. He's the man 18 that close family, distant family, and even new friends, talk 19 about as the man to come to when you have a crisis, when you 20 need help or, more importantly he's the one that checks in and 21 asks how you're doing and is the rare person that genuinely 22 wants to hear the answer; he generally wants to know.

23 And frankly, your Honor, these letters were so 24 consistent, and they come from across the world. You know, 25 these are people that have a very different way of speaking,

JAO7CONS

1 but they come through in a way that to me at least is 2 incredibly powerful because it's incredibly consistent with who 3 he is.

4 And there is some intangible quality to people, and a 5 lot of different names for people who do something that is good 6 with others. You can call it the golden rule. You can call it
7 categorical imperative. Whatever you call it, these letters 8 are testament to who this man is.

9 You know, you have seen, your Honor, the letter from 10 his wife and the explanation of why she is not here today. I 11 don't want to go into that. I just want to say this:
12 Mr. Black has also raised an amazing family. He has an amazing 13 three young women, his wife, they are glowingly described and 14 not in simple euphemisms about who they are. And his decision 15 on how to behave today and whether or not to involve them here
16 to me as a father is one of the most fatherly things that I
17 have seen. And I think there is no question that when you look 18 at what has happened here -- and regardless of the reason, 19 there are consequences -- Mr. Black, as you read in these 20 letters, he has already endured serious punishment in terms of 21 his career, in terms of the emotionally crushing effects this 22 has had on him. It's not sufficient, but I think if we read 23 these letters of close family and friends, listen to how Mr.
24 Black has changed, he's struggling. Whatever the need is for 25 punishment, that has and will continue to be extracted through

JAO7CONS

1 that. There is a torture of this that has occurred that is the 2 outgrowth of the activity, but it's real and it's occurred.

3 So, the question then becomes, Judge, what are we 4 really asking for? We're simply asking for him to be able to 5 serve a sentence in the UK. And the Court ordered us to 6 address that in our submissions, and we did. There is not -- 7 we don't think given the probation department's 8 recommendation -- the transfer program doesn't work, and 9 frankly, according to the most recent e-mail, it is impossible
10 to gauge. We think that a sentence that would even make it 11 relevant would be inappropriate, so I'm not going to bother 12 talking about that, because I think it's not just something we 13 can count on in any way.

14 What we did, your Honor, was we asked the question, 15 OK, let's simply figure out how Mr. Black can receive the same
16 kind of sentence he could receive if he was a U.S. resident. I
17 don't want special treatment, I just want equally available 18 options.

19 So, what we believe -- because we think home 20 confinement here is an appropriate sentence -- special 21 condition -- is we said how do we do that. Well, first, given 22 the technological world, if you want to have a similar system 23 to make sure we know where he is and he is confined and he is 24 suffering those penalties, that's fine. I mean the technology 25 is on all of our desktops. There is GPS, Skype, e-mailing

JAO7CONS

1 every day. All of those things are completely available, and 2 they're reliable, and because of the time difference if they 3 want to make sure that Mr. Black is at 9 o'clock is home, the 4 day isn't even over, you can do it that way. But we didn't 5 think that was a sufficient answer.

6 So, what we did was in the UK any kind of electronic 7 monitoring is actually not done by the UK government; it's 8 contracted out. So, we got another very reputable firm with 9 major law enforcement credentials, and we said to them we need 10 you to tell us can you confine somebody with electronic 11 monitoring, these are the conditions, and you have to report 12 directly to the Court and the probation department. And we've 13 given you their report; we've given you their -- they are 14 serious law enforcement people, and they will confine Mr. Black 15 and ensure that he follows whatever conditions this Court 16 orders.

17 Now, I think the record shows that Mr. Black is going 18 to do that anyway. I don't think any of us have a serious 19 concern about noncompliance. But to the extent the Court wants 20 a robust additional punishment that sends a clear message under 21 these circumstances, we have provided that option. We have 22 talked about it with probation; I think that they will be 23 guided by what the Court does. But there is no technological 24 or issue with doing it. And it's not special. It's simply the 25 same as Mr. Black has -- it's the same as it would be if

JAO7CONS

1 Mr. Black was a U.S. citizen or resident.

2 Your Honor, we've traveled a long road here, but I 3 think today, as you've said repeatedly, you need to have 4 punishment but you need to have proportionality, you need to 5 have a sense that Mr. Black is being punished for what he did
6 and not all this other stuff. You need to look at how this 7 system -- this is not about prosecution, it's about 8 punishment -- is being applied.

9 And, frankly to make these two men the tip of the 10 spear -- given what we know about all these facts -- they 11 should be punished, but they shouldn't be punished more than is 12 necessary.

13 Therefore, this is a humbling day, and with humility I 14 say to you, Judge, I truly submit that the sentence that is 15 sufficient but no greater than necessary is a sentence that 16 allows Mr. Black to be punished but to do it where he belongs, 17 in the UK, because even if you impose a short sentence here 18 it's going to have a scathing set of potential consequences and 19 potential results that are so bad that no one here, a fair 20 minded person, would feel that that is the right thing to have 21 happened.

22 So, I thank the Court for its many courtesies, and I 23 respectfully ask please grant our request. Thank you for your 24 time and attention, your Honor.

25 THE COURT: Mr. Connolly, do you have anything you

JAO7CONS

1 want to say?

2 THE DEFENDANT: No, your Honor.

3 MR. BREEN: Respectfully, your Honor, because of a 4 appellate issues --

5 THE COURT: I quite understand.

6 Mr. Black, do you have anything you want to say?

7 DEFENDANT BLACK: Yes, please, your Honor.

8 Thank you for the opportunity to speak, your Honor.

9 As I believe you are aware, this process has completely 10 shattered me. I have come to this country voluntarily because 11 I believe in the process and the law, and I would like to thank 12 your Honor.

13 I am devastated by the fact I ended up here before 14 you. I feel incredible remorse for my involvement in these 15 events and so profoundly for my wife and children and those that 16 rely on me and believe in me.

17 My life will never be the same. I am committed to my 18 family and all those who supported me over these past many 19 years. I ask for leniency, your Honor, because I want to be 20 able to spend the rest of my days making it up to them.

21 I would like to take a moment to express my thanks to 22 these people: I want to thank my attorneys for their skill and 23 the phenomenally hard work over the last few years. Their 24 dedication to my cause is an inspiration. I also want to thank 25 my sister Lindsay and brother-in-law Douglas for taking the

JAO7CONS

1 time out of their lives and responsibilities to fly across the 2 ocean and support me here. And I want to thank my many friends
3 and family who took the time to write on my behalf. And most 4 importantly, I want to thank my wife and children whose love
5 and support is my entire world.

6 Thank you very much, your Honor.

7 THE COURT: Okay. I have to turn to the elephant in 8 the room because it is raised without being named by everyone's 9 presentation.

10 Mr. Connolly -- who was lucky that I don't bear him a 11 grudge for the silly thing he did last summer -- stole my 12 thunder on this one. He called his self-published screed 13 "Scapegoat." It is a word that I have thought of often over 14 the past three years. The Levitical scapegoat was a real goat, 15 which was is sent out into the wilderness after the high priest 16 had symbolically laid the sins of the people on its back.

17 We have syncretized this ancient religious image, and 18 today we use it to refer to people who are blamed for the 19 wrongdoings, mistakes and faults of others -- especially for 20 reasons of expediency.

21 Mr. Connolly believes that he and Mr. Black are being 22 made scapegoats here, to which I say: Yes and no.

23 Gavin Black and Matthew Connolly were participants
24 along with many other people, a few of whom have been indicted 25 here and abroad, most of them have not, in a massive effort,

JAO7CONS

1 one that went on at many if not all of the submitting banks 2 over a course of years to manipulate LIBOR to benefit the 3 banks' trading positions.

4 So, it's not quite fair, gentlemen, to say that you're 5 being blamed for the wrongdoing of others. The scapegoat was 6 sinless; you are not. You haven't done nothing wrong. You 7 were found guilty by a jury of 12, and there is evidence to 8 support their verdict, and you should be sentenced for what you 9 did.

10 But I do think it is fair to say that the government 11 has used Mr. Connolly and Mr. Black, as well as a few other 12 people -- none of whom was at the highest levels -- as proxy 13 wrongdoers, to make them an example for the wrongdoings of 14 those two institutions, Deutsche Bank and Rabobank in this 15 court, and for similar wrongdoing of other unindicted 16 institutions as well.

17 Now, I quite understand that the government could not 18 possibly prosecute all of the people who were involved at any 19 time with attempts to manipulate U.S. dollar LIBOR. It was 20 expedient for the government to focus on a few people at a 21 limited number of institutions, and the government did so. But 22 the government -- and to its credit Mr. Koenig has been 23 perfectly honest -- now asks the Court to impose excessively 24 large punishments relative to the actual wrongdoing perpetrated 25 by these two individuals on Mr. Connolly and Mr. Black because

1 of a far more widespread problem in which hundreds of other 2 people at Deutsche Bank and elsewhere were also wrongdoers, and 3 the government asks that I do that to make an example of them.
4 The government's really sole basis among the 3553 factors for 5 asking for the sentence it seeks -- it's a guideline 6 sentence -- is general deterrence. I yet cannot make 7 Mr. Connolly and Mr. Black scapegoats for the sins of the 8 entire industry. They stand convicted of crimes for which they 9 will be punished, and that is all they will be punished for.

10 Turning specifically to the Section 3553(a) factors:
11 The crime was serious and not victimless, but the defendants, 12 these two men, were very minor participants in that crime.
13 This is especially true of Mr. Connolly, and it's also true of 14 Mr. Black when looked at relative to others. Mr. Levine is not 15 incorrect when he says that the government cooperated down in 16 this case.

17 The defendants have lived otherwise exemplary lives.
18 The letters that I have received, and I have a read them, are 19 genuinely moving. They present no risk of recidivism and no 20 danger to the public.

21 Under Section 3553, I must of course consider the 22 sentencing guidelines -- as I have labored to calculate them -- 23 but I, like probation Officer Kim, find them to be inconsistent 24 with the parsimony principle that governs sentencing.

25 The flaws in the fraud guideline, as articulated by

JAO7CONS

1 Judge Rakoff in the Rabobank sentencings, and by many other 2 judges of this and other courts -- including me on other 3 occasions -- make a guideline sentence way out of line with 4 respect to these two men, and they would be even more out of 5 line if I had fully accepted the government's calculation of 6 intended loss.

7 The guidelines sentences for these defendants are also 8 out of line with similarly situated defendants who have 9 committed the same crime. The only fair comparators in my 10 estimation are others who were involved in the similar effort
11 to nudge LIBOR in one direction or the other. The two Rabobank
12 traders who went to trial before Judge Rakoff, who were much 13 more involved at their bank with this exercise than Messrs.
14 Connolly and Black were at Deutsche Bank, were given relatively 15 modest below guideline sentences, which of course they ended up 16 not serving because of the Kastigar reversal and the vacatur of 17 their convictions. As far as I know, nobody else has gone to 18 prison, with the exception of this person Mr. Hayes, whom I 19 know nothing about, except what I read in the sentencing 20 transcript for the Rabobank case, and what I read there does 21 not make him anything like a genuine comparator to Mr. Connolly
22 and Mr. Black. He apparently bribed people, he obstructed 23 justice, all way beyond anything that went on here, and he 24 ended up serving -- his sentence was 11 years but he ended up 25 serving in England, so he ended up serving five and a half

JAO7CONS

1 years. These defendants were bit players by comparison and 2 would have to be sentenced to significantly less than that for 3 their sentences to be fairly proportional.

4 A guideline sentence is terribly out of whack
5 comparing in particular Mr. Connolly, who made just six 6 documented requests -- and I think there is no real basis on 7 which the government could even allege seriously that he made 8 any other requests -- with Mr. Parietti, who was far more 9 culpable and who got away with not only no jail time but he got 10 to keep his $9 million bonus that was earned during the period 11 of the conspiracy. I recognize that he was a cooperator but, 12 as I've already said, I personally had some issues with his 13 testimony, and the jury apparently did too since it acquitted 14 Mr. Connolly of the counts involving Mr. Parietti's activity.
15 I prefer to sentence Mr. Connolly for his own proven 16 misconduct, which in this case consists of the six requests 17 that he made.

18 I thus reject a guideline sentence as appropriate for 19 either defendant.

20 The government -- knowing full well that neither of 21 these defendants needs to be punished any more than they 22 already has been in order to fulfill the goal of specific 23 deterrence, extols the goal of general deterrence -- extols the 24 goal of general deterrence as justification for imposing a 25 lengthy term of incarceration on these two men.

JAO7CONS

1 Now, it turns out I've had to think about judicial 2 philosophy recently both because I was teaching a class and 3 because I was simultaneously working on this sentence, and I
4 realized that I'm not a big fan of general deterrence as a 5 driving factor in punishment. If you want to refer to the 6 great philosophers of punishment, I'm more a Kantian than 7 Beccarian; I'm a retributivist than a utilitarian. What that 8 means is I'm more interested in punishing someone for what he 9 did than making him an example to others so that they will not 10 do the same. It's a matter of personal philosophy.

11 But general deterrence is a Section 3553(a) factor, 12 and I do have to consider it, and I have considered it. And 13 I've considered it in light of everything that you all have 14 said here and that you have written before saying it, and I
15 have considered it in the way that Judge Rakoff considered it 16 at the Rabobank sentencing. And he is a great scholar in this 17 area, and he is really much more interested in these things as 18 a philosophical matter than I think I am naturally, and he 19 really does read a lot of stuff about this. And I thought 20 about it also in the context of what I know about the financial 21 services industry and the people who work in it. And here is 22 what I conclude:

23 To the extent that the players in the market are 24 capable of being deterred by what has happened to these two 25 men -- including specifically those players in the market who

JAO7CONS

1 thank God every night before they go to bed that they got away
2 with what Matt Connolly and Gavin Black were convicted of -- 3 and there are quite a few of them out there -- a long period of 4 incarceration for these defendants is simply not needed to 5 accomplish the goal of general deterrence. The players in the 6 market have witnessed their arrest, the years spent in 7 chancery -- which are not over yet -- the loss of jobs and 8 employability, the financial stress on them and their families, 9 the loss of status in the community, and at least in 10 Mr. Black's case the development of a serious health issue, all 11 collateral consequences that play into general deterrence.

12 All other things being equal, I would sentence 13 Mr. Black to a modest, short term of imprisonment, probably 14 quite in line with probation Officer Kim's recommendation -- 15 his very thoughtful recommendation -- and I would sentence
16 Mr. Connolly to a lesser sentence because these two men are not 17 equivalent in the great LIBOR scheme of things. They're both 18 low on the totem pole, but Connolly is lower than Black.

19 The problem here is that all other things aren't 20 equal. And I've struggled with this for weeks. I did my own 21 research. And Eric Silverberg, my former law clerk, is here
22 today; he worked on this for me. If there were a way that I 23 could sentence Mr. Black to serve a term of incarceration in 24 the United Kingdom, I would do it, but there is no way. There 25 is a procedure for transferring a prisoner from the United

JAO7CONS

1 States to the United Kingdom. It is lengthy. It is 2 cumbersome. It is uncertain of result. And it is impossible
3 to invoke it until you are serving a sentence in an institution
4 in the United States. If I could sentence Mr. Black to a term
5 of incarceration -- a brief term of incarceration -- knowing 6 that he would go to a facility appropriate to his criminal 7 conduct, I would do it. But I know that I can't. I know that 8 simply because he is a noncitizen -- and I use that term
9 advisedly. He is not an illegal alien. But because he is a 10 non-citizen, he will not be eligible to serve his sentence in 11 the same way that any American citizen who stood convicted of 12 this crime would serve. And that's not right.

13 And for reasons that are incomprehensible to me, were 14 I to sentence him to a short term of imprisonment -- which 15 would be served in a private facility and not at some place 16 like FCI Allenwood, or not at a medical facility, which I think 17 I would strongly recommend, given what I know about Mr. Black's 18 medical condition -- for reasons I cannot comprehend, at the 19 end of that term he could not walk out the door and be picked 20 up by Mr. Levine and taken to the airport. He would be treated 21 like an illegal alien, and he would be released into the 22 custody of ICE, and at some point long after my intended 23 sentence had expired he would be deported. And that's not 24 right.

25 I have gone back and forth, and back and forth, and

JAO7CONS

1 back and forth on this, but when I look at this chart,
2 McGillicuddy Exhibit 1, and look at the number of instances out
3 of 130 in which Gavin Black made a request of a submitter to 4 try to move LIBOR, and the amount of money that the government 5 estimates was intended to be lost -- and I've accepted the 6 government's formula, not without thinking that there is a lot
7 wrong with it -- though I appreciate your effort -- I can't 8 bring myself to impose a sentence of incarceration in the 9 United States for Mr. Black. And since I can't impose a 10 sentence of incarceration to be served in the United Kingdom on 11 Mr. Black -- which as I said I would do -- I am remitted to 12 sentencing him to some form of home confinement to be served in 13 his native country, and I do that because -- while, Mr. Black, 14 I don't like the way you played the game -- you were really a 15 bit player in this.

16 Mr. Connolly was barely a player at all. And given 17 what has happened to everybody else in this case, and what has 18 not happened to a lot of people who aren't in this case -- and 19 aren't in other cases -- it would be a travesty to sentence
20 Matt Connolly to a term of incarceration.

21 And certainly if I'm not going to sentence Mr. Black 22 to one because of the unusual "all other things are not equal"
23 collateral consequence of his not being a United States 24 citizen, I can't mete out a sentence of imprisonment on 25 Mr. Connolly, who truly -- I have been through this evidence --

JAO7CONS

1 is the least culpable person I have heard about.

2 So that I suppose is the consequence of cooperating
3 down, as Mr. Levine put it. The real sentence here began three 4 years ago and will last for the rest of your lives. It will 5 include the payment of a substantial fine -- one that will 6 exceed the dollar amount of intended loss as calculated by the 7 government for which you are personally liable but which will 8 come nowhere close to the $3 million fine sought by the 9 government -- limit all restrictions on your liberty for a 10 while, and will involve the certain knowledge that nothing can 11 give you back your old lives, that in that sense what you have 12 described to me as a nightmare never ends.

13 I emphasize that for me the proportionality to others
14 involved is a really important consideration in sentencing. It 15 just is. I'm always uncomfortable when I'm asked in any 16 context -- it usually happens in the drug context -- to 17 sentence the low man on the totem pole while the big guy goes 18 free.

19 I have reviewed the presentence report. I'm going to 20 ask Mr. Kim -- who has done such yeoman service -- to revise 21 them to reflect the findings that the Court has placed on the 22 record today. With those revisions I will accept and adopt 23 them as my findings. I have already given you the guideline 24 calculations.

25 Mr. Connolly, will you please rise. Docket number 16

JAO7CONS

1 Crim. 370. I hereby sentence you to time served, plus a term
2 of two years' supervised release, to include a term of six 3 months' home confinement. That's on each count. The sentence
4 is to run concurrently. And I sentence you to pay a fine of 5 $100,000. This fine is payable due and payable immediately, 6 together with the special assessment of $300. That's $100 per 7 count.

8 During the term of your supervision you must not 9 commit another federal, state or local crime; you must not 10 unlawfully possess a controlled substance; and you must refrain 11 from the unlawful use of a controlled substance, submitting to 12 one drug test within 15 days from your release from 13 imprisonment, and at least two periodic drug tests thereafter 14 as determined by the court. You must cooperate in the 15 collection of DNA as directed by the probation officer. You 16 must pay the assessment imposed in accordance with 18 United 17 States Code Section 3013; and you must pay the fine, and the 18 fine is due and payable within 60 days. You must notify the 19 court of any material change in your economic circumstances 20 that might affect your ability to pay the fine or the special 21 assessment. And you must comply with the standard conditions 22 that have been adopted by this Court, which will be given to 23 you. You will look at them, and you will sign off on them.
24 And until such time as the fine has been fully paid, you must 25 comply with the special condition of providing your probation

JAO7CONS

1 officer with access to any financial information that the 2 probation officer requests.

3 Restitution is not an issue in this case. Forfeiture 4 is not applicable.

5 You may be seated, sir.

6 Mr. Black, under docket number 16 Crim. 370, I hereby 7 sentence you to a term of time served, plus three years of 8 supervision, to include a term of nine months' home confinement
9 to be served in the United Kingdom, under such circumstances
10 and in accordance with such providers as the probation 11 department shall contract with; or, if the probation department 12 deems that to be inappropriate, then from abroad by our 13 probation department. I don't know really if that's 14 electronically feasible or not, and that's why I have to leave 15 it to probation in the first instance to explore that topic.

16 I should say -- and this applies to both of you -- 17 during the period of home confinement you must remain in your 18 residence, and you may not leave -- in your case for six 19 months; in your case for nine months -- for any purpose except 20 the following: To attend medical appointments, to attend
21 religious services, to attend any further court appearances 22 that may be necessary. I rather imagine there will be an 23 appeal in this case, so...

24 The idea is you're a prisoner in your own home. And I
25 assure you that after six months in your case, Mr. Connolly, or

JAO7CONS

1 nine months in your case Mr. Black -- and I've heard this from 2 people -- you will hate the sight of your own home, and you 3 will be very, very happy to get out.

4 Mr. Black, I impose upon you a fine of $300,000, as 5 recommended by the probation department, and a $200 special 6 assessment. The fine is due and payable in 60 days. The 7 special assessment is due and payable immediately.

8 The same conditions of supervision. You have a nine 9 month period of home confinement, and during that period and 10 for the rest of your term you must not commit another crime, 11 federal, state or local; you must not unlawfully possess a 12 controlled substance; and you must refrain from the unlawful 13 use of controlled substances. I am suspending the mandatory 14 drug testing condition. I gather that Mr. Black is going to be 15 under rather constant medical care in the United Kingdom. You 16 must cooperate in the collection of DNA as directed by the 17 probation officer, pay the assessment imposed in accordance 18 with 18 United States Code, Section 3013, and pay your fine 19 within 60 days, notifying the Court of any material change in 20 your economic circumstances that might affect your ability to 21 do either of those things. You must comply with the standard 22 conditions of supervision, which will be given to you for your 23 review and you will sign off on them. And you must provide the 24 probation officer with access to any requested financial 25 information while the fine remains unpaid.

JAO7CONS

1 Restitution is not an issue. Forfeiture is not being 2 sought.

3 You may be seated.

4 Matthew John Connolly and Gavin Campbell Black, you
5 have the right to take an appeal from the verdict of the jury 6 and from the sentence that has been imposed upon you. You have 7 a right to counsel in connection with any appeal that you may 8 choose to file, and if you do not have the funds with which to 9 hire an attorney, counsel will be appointed to represent you.

10 Mr. Connolly, do you understand that?

11 DEFENDANT CONNOLLY: Yes, I do, your Honor.

12 THE COURT: Mr. Black, do you understand that?

13 DEFENDANT BLACK: Yes, your Honor.

14 THE COURT: It is possible given the sentence that I 15 have imposed that the government may decide to take an appeal.
16 If it does, you have the same right to representation and the 17 right to a publicly financed lawyer if you cannot afford to 18 hire private counsel. Do you understand, sir?

19 DEFENDANT CONNOLLY: Yes, your Honor.

20 THE COURT: Do you understand, sir?

21 DEFENDANT BLACK: Yes, your Honor.

22 THE COURT: OK. What else do we have from the 23 government?

24 MS. ANDERSON: I just wanted to clarify. If for some
